More Than Meets The Eye

8:40 A.M. A regular school day is about to begin. But, today we have a visitor. What follows might be this visitor's reactions to our school day.

As the buses unload, our visitor finds it strange that an all boy's school shares its transportation with an all girl's school. The visitor strides into the foyer and notices the students. Ties, neat haircuts, no jeans or gym shoes — strict discipline here.

Look at all the trophies, a second place trophy for '79 football team. Must be a trophy for every kid in the school. There's a Brother, wonder how well they teach? Seeing the sign for morning Mass, he's at first surprised, but then remembers that this is a Catholic school.

8:47, the first bell rings. He enters a class and sits down. The period passes quickly, and he's impressed by the respect shown by both the teachers and the students. After the period ends, our visitor walks to the library where a special speaker is giving a presentation. To him, this activity shows the administration's concern for the students. After listening to the speaker for 40 minutes, the P.A. system suddenly comes on. For five minutes he listens to intramural scores, drive results, the plans of other organizations and reminders of future events. The school sure doesn't have a lack of activity, he thinks.

As homeroom period ends, he walks by the Guidance Counselor's office and notices the long list of Illinois State Scholars. Next, he enters the front office and is greeted by Br. MacIntyre. For two hours Br. MacIntyre and he talk inside of Br. MacIntyre's office. From the office, our visitor returns to the gym and watches lunchtime intramurals. Wow. These kids never stop. After the sixth period, he begins to read the bulletin boards: athletics, fund-raisers, drama events. He wonders, where does it end? Once again he walks back into the academic section, this time he's impressed by the science labs.

Finally, the eighth period ends. Now, he expects the school to empty quickly. However, students are running, working out, getting ready for competition. Our visitor also sees drama in the gym, kids planning dances, other kids working on yearbook, newspaper and other activities in the planning stages. Just watching all the endless activity has tired out our visitor and he heads for the door.

Though our list of activities and triumphs is much longer, sometimes we need to take an outsider's view to appreciate our school.

Life On Campus: Not Bad

During an ordinary school day, students appear to be missing as the school sometimes seems calm and quiet. However, a closer look reveals that this belief is incorrect; students are always engaging in many activities throughout the school day. Outside of class, students manage to pass the time quickly even though it can be prolonged like the times preceding or following the school day, or the second half of lunch, or it can be as brief as the time between classes. During these breaks, students are able to joke around, participate in sports, or just pass the time in reflection.

Starting well before the first bell rings, students begin the day with a walk or by riding a bus, car, or bike. In pre-school hours the campus is bustling with life. Crowds of people gather in the gym foyer reading papers, talking with friends, doing forgotten homework, or catching up on sleep. Others find it more peaceful in the library. Still others prefer playing frisbee or catch outdoors or aimlessly wandering through the halls.

Within academic hours students seem to be hibernating. But every forty-one minutes, the change occurs as the halls are invaded by multitudes of students who reveal their brief presence to each of the senses.

The afternoon extra-curricular activities represent a unique aspect of St. Laurence. Many students are concentrated in the gym foyer, on the track, in the weight rooms, or in the publication offices. These students reveal the seemingly unending student involvement in school activities. By looking closer into St. Laurence, students can almost always be seen present, giving the school an excellent "Campus Life."

Gold Rush Fever Hits School

Characterized by numerous festivities, Homecoming Week sparked student support for the football team. Although the week seemed to pass quickly, co-chairmen Wally Shields and Kevin Cooke, along with the help of many volunteers, began preparing for the event in August. The co-chairmen's duties included ordering decorations and other necessities, as well as appraising seven bands.

Encouraging enthusiasm during Homecoming Week, the Student Council sponsored the sale of hats, shirts, and buttons. Thursday, students exemplified their spirit by wearing "Viking Fever — Catch It" buttons and that night, students had a chance to create posters supporting the football team. On Friday, students further illustrated their spirit by wearing the official Homecoming shirt designed by senior Art Schoenke. During the lunch periods, teachers judged the decorated derbies and awarded prizes to the winners in each period. Incited by the inspiring speeches given at the Pep Rally, the student body enthusiastically responded to the call to annihilate Mendel. Working from 8 AM to 11 PM on Saturday, Mr. Scott and a group of volunteers converted the cafeteria, the foyer, and the gym for Sunday's semi-formal dance.

Early Sunday morning, floats arrived in the school parking lot to be judged by Mr. McNicholas, Mr. Scott, Marion Jelcz, Neal Warrer, and Bob Wysocki. The contest winners received one-hundred dollars, while the second and third place finishers received fifty and twenty dollars respectively. After the judging concluded, the parade was ready to start. Consisting of six floats, twenty-two emergency vehicles, the Gold 100 Band, five convertibles, and one pick-up, the parade began its drive towards Reavis Stadium at noon.

Responding to the cheering fans, the inspired football team trounced Mendel, 41-6. Scoring four touchdowns in the second quarter, the offense rolled up 385 total yards. On the other hand, the defense did not allow a first down or a completed pass until the final three minutes of the game. The offense, the defense, and the special teams all combined their efforts to destroy the opposition.

Following the lopsided victory, the semi-formal dance culminated Homecoming Week. Over three hundred couples danced to the music of 'Free Wheelin' and 'Shooter' in a starry night atmosphere, which appropriately reflected the theme of the dance — "Just You and Me." With numerous people doing their part, Homecoming Week was truly enjoyed by all.

Revised Rules Reflect Intentions

Starting with its first meeting, the Student Council expressed its intention to "get things done." During this meeting, scholastic qualifications for the Council were lowered. Next, a weekly officers' meeting with the Principal replaced the inefficient grievance committee. In addition, the word "moderator" was altered to "advisor," the position held by Br. Zlatis. This change implied that the faculty member was an equal partner.

In the area of dances, the Homecoming Semi-Formal netted a record $1700 and the first mixer recorded a $154 profit. Also during the football season, the Council brought back poster nights, took over the operation of rooter buses, and organized pep rallies.

As in the past, drives continued to thrive. The first blood drive collected 117 pints and achieved coverage for the entire school. Twenty-five volunteers were provided for the Misericordia Tootsie-Roll Drive by the Council. It also provided workers for the Open House, Candy Drive, and Orientation. Other fund raisers and our collection of Christmas cards for the Iranian hostages, all reflected the determination of the officers, Mitch Tomaskiewicz, Wally Shields, Bob Gaddis, Bob Lehman and the entire school.

The Muscular Dystrophy Drive featured the "Boyzz" concert. Besides drives, the Council arranged and coordinated the junior and senior Proms. Yet, raising money was not the only goal of our Council. When the island of Dominica was devastated by a hurricane, the Council donated $100 to a relief fund for the island.

Intramurals Instill Sportsmanship

Engaging in friendly competition, students enhanced their sportsmanship by participating in the intramural program. Coordinated by Mr. Fabrizio, lunchtime activity provided many students with a break from the daily grind. After paying a small service fee, students began their quest to become lunchtime champions in either football, soccer, speedball, dodgeball, basketball, volleyball, or softball.

However, intramural competition was not limited to the second half of lunch. Directed by Br. O'Donnell, the Junior-Senior Basketball League consisted of eleven regular season games played on weeknights. Held on Sundays, the Frosh-Soph Basketball League was coordinated by Mr. Tarjan. After school on Fridays, students had the opportunity of brushing up on their bowling skills under the direction of Brs. McKenna and Zlatis. Introduced this year by Br. Zlatis, raquetball intramurals were held before and after school at nearby raquet clubs.

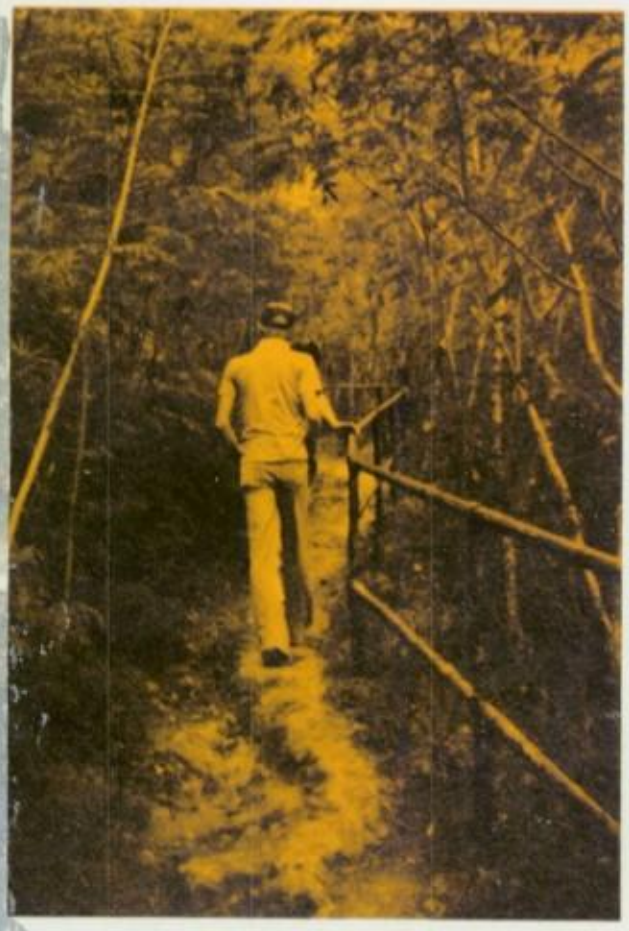
Aloha From Hawaii



Leaving early in the morning on April 3rd, some 70 seniors and five chaperones left on Northwest Orient Airlines for Hawaii at a cost of $650 per person. After ten hours and two quick stops, one in Minneapolis and one in Los Angeles, the plane finally landed at Honolulu International Airport. Before leaving the airport, the students and the chaperones received the traditional lei greeting. The group then proceeded to the Hyatt Regency Hotel where it stayed for the trip's duration.

Several exciting events, such as the Al Harrington Show, Sunset Dinner Cruise, Pearl Harbor Tour, and the Campbell Estates Luau were offered by the C-S Travel Agency. The seniors were also able to rent mopeds, surf, and go snorkeling with curfew set at 2 AM.

Early on April 10th, the group boarded the bus which took them to the Honolulu International Airport. The return flight arrived at O'Hare Airport at 1 AM on Friday April 11th, and the group arrived at the school at 2 AM. Here, much unlike in Hawaii, the tired travelers were welcomed by the cold, chilly weather of Chicago.

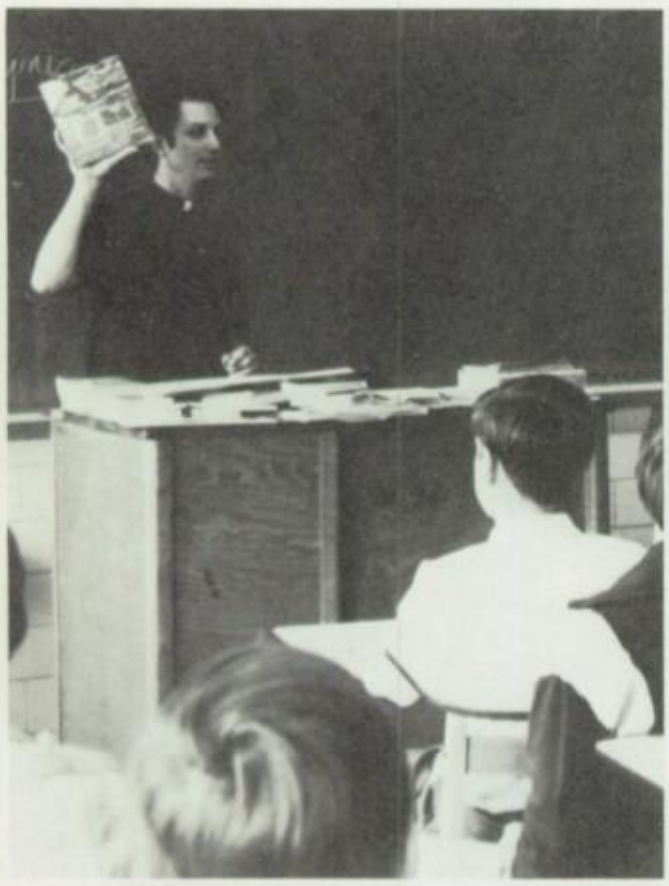
Getting In The Swing Of Things



Incoming Freshmen first arrived at St. Laurence on Friday August 24 to purchase books, locks, and other supplies. Then on August 27, they returned for the second half of their orientation. Assembled in the gym, they were officially greeted by Br. Dunne. Following the talk on school policy, teachers and upperclass volunteers escorted the Freshmen to their homerooms. After waiting in their homeroom for a while, the Freshmen went through a simulated class schedule. They also posed for ID pictures, obtained Tad Cards, and received English Grammar books. The two day orientation enabled the Freshmen to view their new school with minimum disturbance.

On August 28, Sophomores, Juniors, and Seniors returned to school. Their arrival was also greeted by Br. Dunne in the gym. After having been refreshed on school policies, the students purchased books, had ID pictures taken, and received Tad Cards. As a result of the program, students were better prepared for St. Laurence.

Food For Thought

The arrival of the Candy Drive was an exemplary factor proving that yet another school year had begun. A record shattering $70,000 was accumulated over the ten-day drive. The profits financed a new computer studies program projected to commence in 1980.

In recognition of the hard work put forth by students, November 21st was declared as a school holiday. Besides this recognition, throughout the drive, students who had sold their quotas were eligible for daily drawings; prizes, which totaled over $2000 included televisions, radios, eight track tape players and cameras.

Culminating the entire week, a special grand prize stereo set was raffled off, along with a ticket for the senior trip to Hawaii. On this final day, outstanding salesmen were also awarded cash prizes for their efforts; top salesmen John and Jim Rojas, who sold $597 worth of candy, received $100. Mike Rudnicki, second place winner received $75, Pat Chico received $50 and Jeff Johnson received $25.

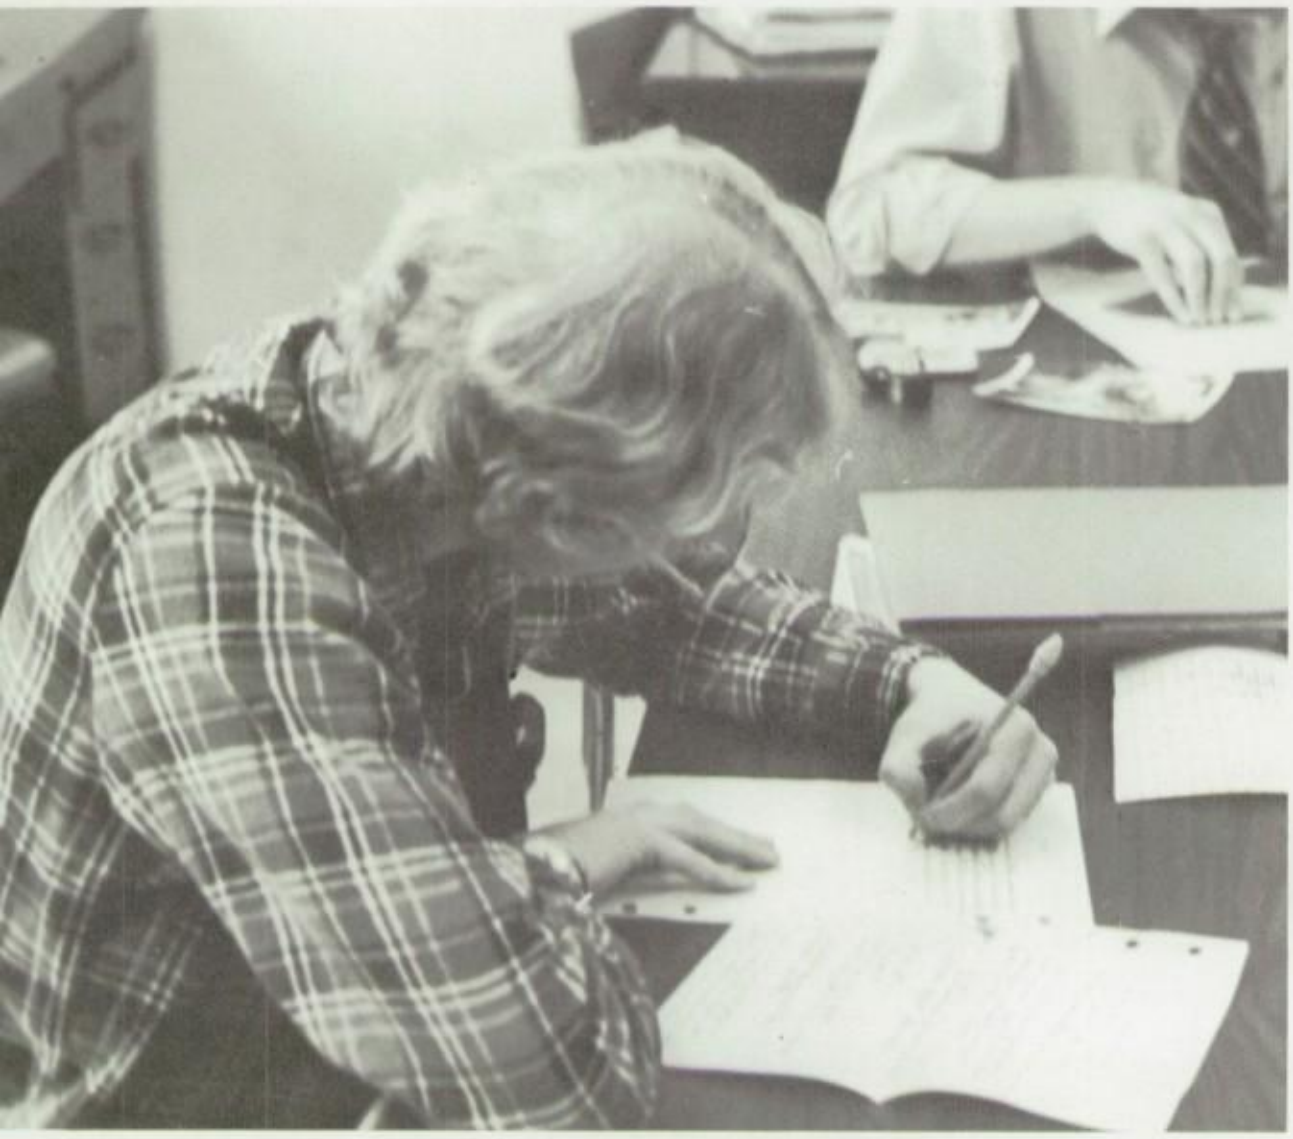
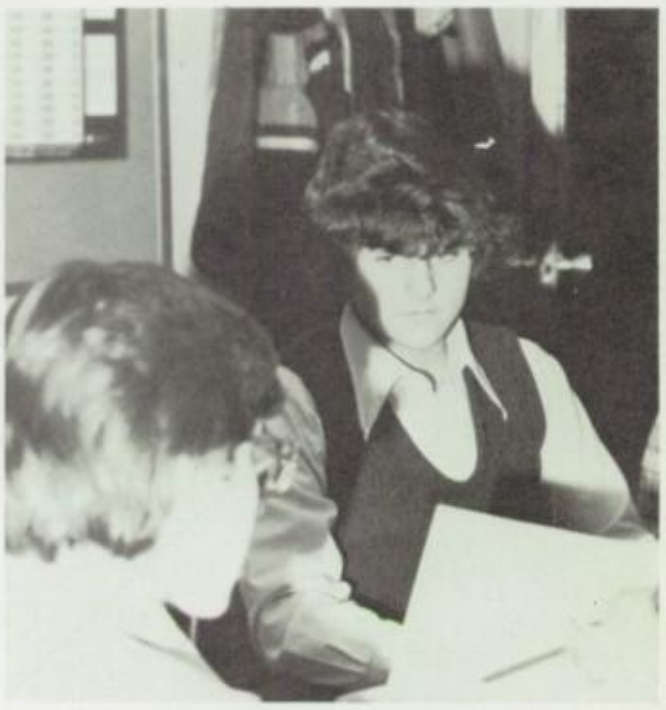
For Future Years





Capturing the year's events, the yearbook staff worked four to five days a week in completing the yearbook. Putting in two hours almost every day, each staff member worked on page designs, wrote articles, and chose any needed photographs. Under the guidance of first year moderator Br. Dunne, second year co-editors Jeff Petro and Marion Jelcz continued to maintain the yearbook's excellence. With a staff slightly larger than last year, the co-editors and assistant editor Tom Miller were able to concentrate more on the books finer aspects.

Carried over from the previous year, the idea of having 16 color pages was once again integrated into the book. Along with the idea of using color photographs, the staff was also able to use other new and innovative ideas in the 1980 Valhallan. Yet, even with a multitude of new ideas, the staff successfully met its first two deadlines. Delaying the next two deadlines, the staff was pressed for time in completing the final pages. Working diligently though, the entire staff succeeded in publishing the 16th volume of the Valhallan.

Telling It Like It Is

Informing students on results of school events and activities, the Helm provided a glimpse of outside interests through special feature articles. Each issue's entire format was reviewed at editorial board meetings, held once or twice each deadline. Editor Bob Wysocki and first year advisor Br. McCormack conducted these meetings assuring that quality articles and feature stories were in the paper. Once the board meetings ended, individual editors then assigned articles to the staff members. Usually, each staff member was allowed three to five weeks in which to complete his assignment. Once the assignment was turned in, one of the five editors: Bob Wysocki, Editor-in-Chief; John Flynn, Assistant Editor; Mike Cello, Sports Editor; Mike Pontillo, Features Editor; and Ray Matyka, News Editor; thoroughly reviewed its contents.

Each issue of the Helm displayed art work or a picture on the cover. The remainder of the pages employed magazine layout format. Graphics Editor Pat Smith reviewed all of the artwork included in each issue of the Helm. Another essential aspect of the paper was the advertisements purchased by the local businesses. These ads, sold by Business Manager Jim Nudo, served a dual purpose. First, they informed students of special discounts and second, the ads helped to finance the paper's production. Once the paper was complete, Circulation Manager Mike Madaj handled it's distribution. With each staff member performing his duties, the Helm functioned smoothly for its 19th consecutive year.

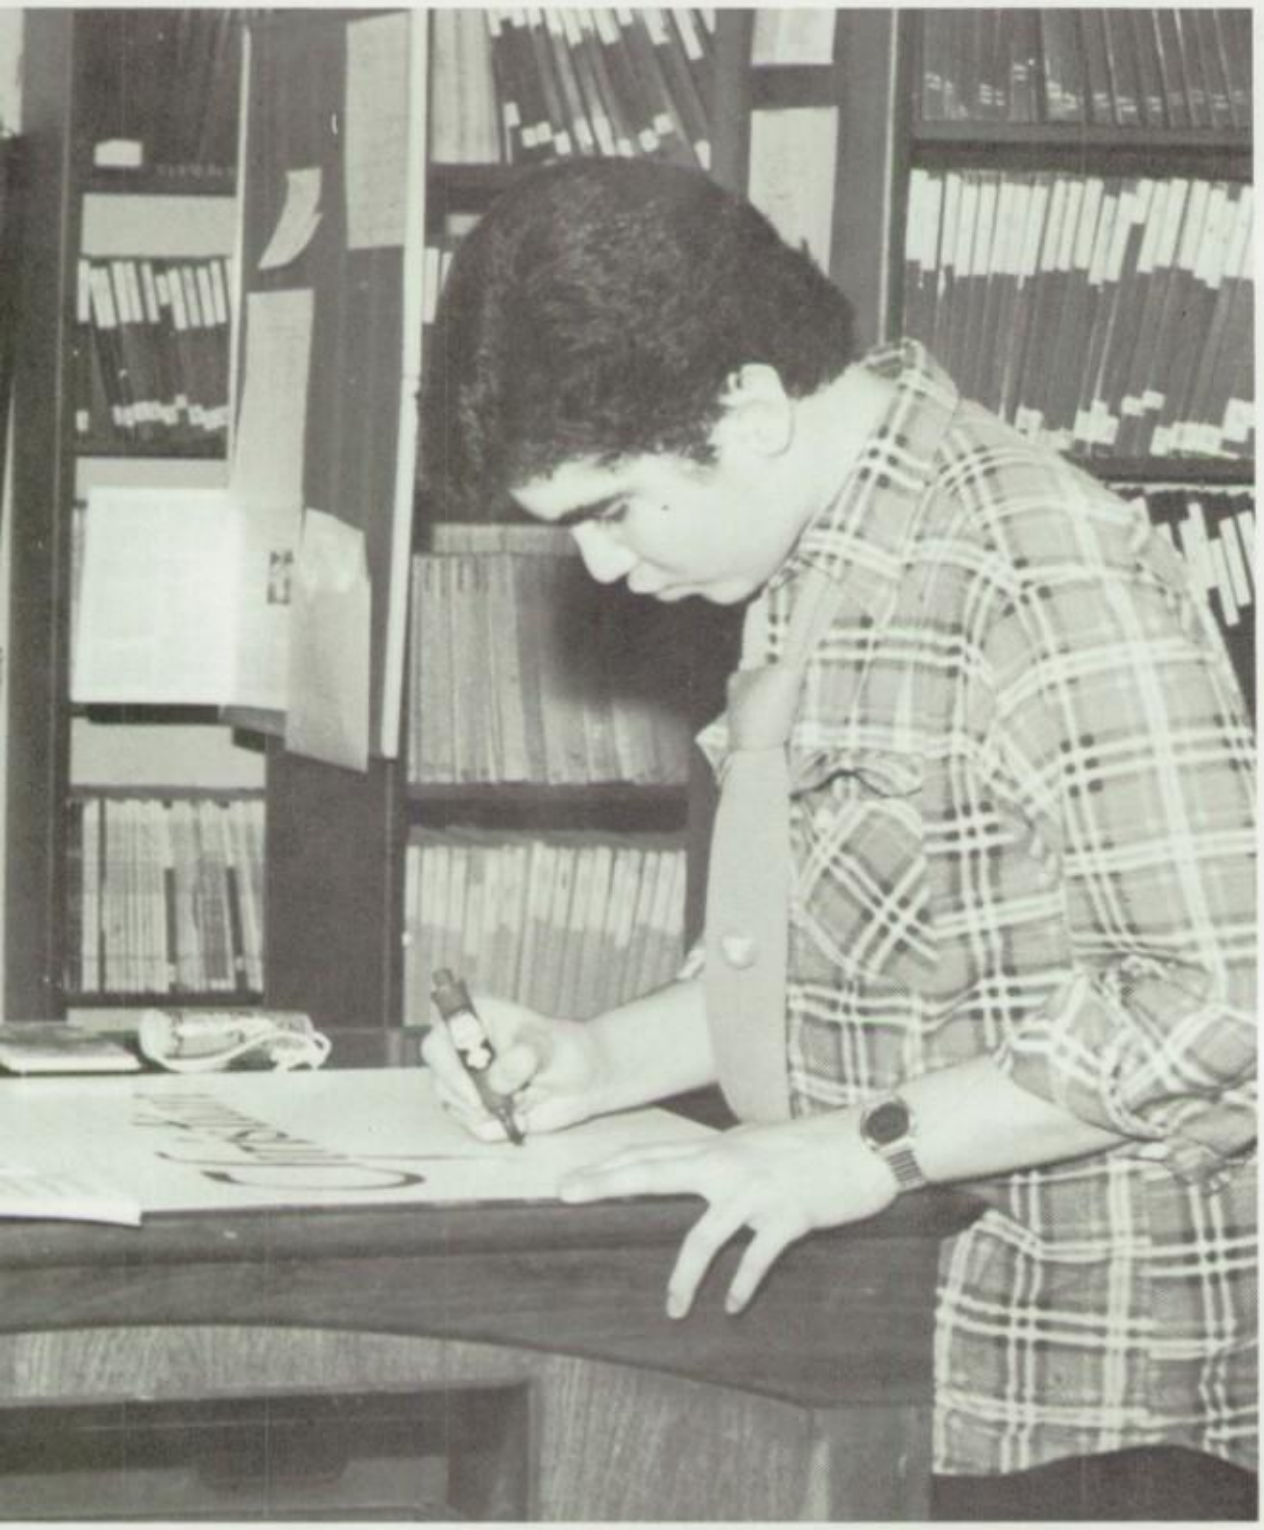
Managing The Library



Assuring that the library could be used advantageously by everyone, Br. Messick and his twenty member media staff continually maintained the library's general excellence. In order to maintain the excellence, the staff found it necessary to constantly organize all of the materials, as well as create numerous book displays. The video tape recorders, which the more responsible staff members operated, also added to the educational services offered by the library.

Besides the daily organization tasks, the staff members completely reorganized the library over the Christmas vacation. First, the learning center, which consisted of obsolete equipment, was removed. Then, the remaining furniture was completely rearranged offering much more space. Thus, retreats, student council meetings, and lectures by guest speakers all accommodated more people with greater comfort.

The library's annual book display again relied upon the faculty for information. In order to include which books should be ordered for the "Rainbow of Reading," Br. Messick passed out book reviews to all of the teachers. The teachers then informed Br. Messick of the books that they felt would be most beneficial to the students. Thus, students were certain to find a wide variety of books needed for research and general reading. With each year's succeeding book display, the general excellence of the library was continually maintained.

Capturing The Year's Events

Dedicated to capturing the year's highlights, the photography department took, developed, printed and processed films. In addition to the 7-8 hours of weekly darkroom work, each photographer received two to three shooting assignments. The assignments ranged from candid to action shots, and from team to special events shots. Under the direction of first year moderator Br. Dunne, the staff completed assignments for the yearbook, newspaper, and other school functions.

In its first full year of operation, the renovated darkroom aided the photographers in their work. Having modern equipment at their disposal, the staff was able to complete all of the requested work orders in a shorter period of time. Yet, speed was not the staff's primary goal. Instead, the staff worked towards efficiently and professionally reproducing the year's events.

NHS Aids School

Recognizing the school's academically proficient students, the National Honor Society consisted of 32 Seniors and 24 Juniors. In order to belong to the NHS, students had to maintain a 3.5 grade point average while also exhibiting the qualities of leadership, character, service, and scholarship. With a delayed start, the Society held its first official meeting in January with the election of the four officers: Marion Jelcz, President; Dennis Jelcic, Vice-President; Karl Turro, Secretary; and Robert Avery, Treasurer. Moderated by Br. Tomkins, the Society serviced the school in several different ways. The NHS assisted the Guidance Department by tutoring students, and notified Mr. Mahoney of any academic achievements needed to be released to the press. In addition, the Society sponsored Miss Nancy Czerwick to speak on the Pro-Life movement, while also producing a slide presentation designed for the recruitment of eighth grade students.

During the Honors Convocation, the members were formally inducted into the Society. Certificates of membership were distributed after the recitation of the Society's pledge. Later in the year, each member received a pin acknowledging his service to the National Honor Society. By involving academically gifted students in various duties, the NHS promoted the academic spirit in St. Laurence.

Honoring The School's Scholars

Occurring on the evening of March 10, the Honors Convocation formally recognized a variety of outstanding academic achievements. The ceremony also included the induction of the National Honor Society members as well as a financial aid presentation by Mr. Dennis Shea. Conducting the affairs, Br. Tomkins and Mr. Mahoney were the masters of ceremony.

The evening began with the initiation ceremony of the National Honor Society members. The students were seated on stage to recite the Society's official pledge and to receive their certificates of membership. In order to enhance the solemnity of the occasion, the members held candles during the initiation process. The ideals of the Society were presented in short speeches by the four officers of the St. Laurence Chapter. At the conclusion of the induction ceremony, a special award was presented to Glenn Turro for his outstanding contribution to last year's efforts of the Society.

The Convocation continued with a presentation by Mr. Shea of DePaul University. He discussed the different areas of college scholarships and financial aid. He also listed some important guidelines in obtaining these funds, and discussed the availability of this aid. He concluded his speech by expressing his admiration of the academic quality of St. Laurence.

The additional awards were presented by Br. MacIntyre to deserving students. These awards included honor roll certificates, U.S. Savings Bonds, Br. Edmund Ignatius Rice Scholarships, NEDT certificates, Illinois State Scholarship Documents, and National Merit Letters of Commendation. An award was also given to Mike Jeziorski for being the only National Merit Finalist from St. Laurence. These various awards offered an incentive for continued scholastic excellence. By recognizing the efforts of deserving students, the Honors Convocation had become an integral function within the academic realm of St. Laurence.

Band Tour

There you sat, watching one of our football games. Suddenly, we scored; the band strikes up our fight song. The band's performance was the culmination of much practice.

The band consisted of five major groups; the Marching band, the Jazz Band, the Concert Band, the Symphonic Winds and special performance bands, Together, the students composed the Marching band. The Gold 100, practicing from September to November, performed at football games, pep rallies, and in several parades.

Later in the year, the more experienced musicians won places in the Symphonic Winds band which played three major concerts. The younger musicians performed in the Concert band. Playing a few times for the Laurenta Club, the Jazz band displayed its members skills. The Play band and the Polka band headed the special performance groups.

Mr. Leo Henning, Mr. Pat Henning, and Br. McKenna organized all of these bands. One of the men's greater tasks was planning the band's Spring Florida tour. During this tour, students displayed their musical skills which had been built up over the year.

Cabaret Invades Gym

Top: Prior to opening night, Stacy Kostes and Tom Heffernan constantly rehearse in order to perfect their lines.

Bottom: In the play's finale, the entire cast appears on stage.

Portraying a trying depression period, St. Laurence presented the musical CABARET. Preparing three months prior to the opening, Director Mr. Richard Duslack as well as Choreography Consultant Sue Cachey held tryouts and eventually selected a cast of approximately 35 girls and 18 guys. However, many actors and actresses performed in only two of the four shows.

With the cast picked, the work was now just beginning. The set had to be constructed, lines learned, songs sung, and music played. Along with these objectives, Musical Director Mr. Patrick Henning, Set Decorator and Light Designer Mr. Owen Patrick Kerwin, and Vocal Director Mrs. Dorothy Fujimura had to complete their designated jobs before the curtain could be opened.

Using the cafeteria as a make-shift stage for eight of the ten practice weeks, the cast shifted to the gym stage two weeks prior to the production opening in order to assume conditions identical to the actual stage production.

After the work and rehearsals were completed, and the stars: master of ceremonies, Tom McConville; Cliff Bradshaw played by Pat Smith and Tom Heffernan; Fraulein Schneider performed by Carrie Kropeck and Lauren Pytel; and Sally Bowles portrayed by Julie Sawicki and Stacy Kostes were ready, the show opened. Lasting from May 7 until May 10, opening night jitters prevailed but were slowly diminished as the band struck up a tune.

Seen by approximately 1,300 people, Moderator Br. Vranka handled the ticket sales and assured that everything ran smoothly. Viewed by the largest number of people to attend a St. Laurence play, the production of the play was highly praised by the entire audience, which included Mr. Arthur W. Bloom, Chairman of Loyola University's Theatre Department. A few days after seeing the play, Mr. Bloom wrote a letter to Mr. Duslack commending the director and certain cast members.

Religion Through Retreats

In order to assist students in fulfilling their religious obligations and enable students to achieve spiritual contentment, the religious activities program was wide in its range. The Rosary League, Vocations Week, retreats, Masses, and confessions constituted the bulk of the religious program.

Under Br. Tomkin's moderation, the members of the Rosary League successfully serviced their own needs as well as the entire world's for the third consecutive year. The members recited the Rosary the second half of the fifth period each day. Through their prayers, the members concentrated on developing a devotion to the Blessed Mother.

Vocation Week, coordinated by Br. Verre, was celebrated in October. The purpose of Vocation Week centered on awakening students to the wide range of vocations. Throughout the week, the idea of choosing the best vocation for each student was stressed. At the end of the week, students were more aware of the importance of choosing and constantly working at a vocation, be it priesthood for carpentry.

Mandatory for all Freshmen, Sophomores, and Juniors, retreats were optional for Seniors. All of the retreats concentrated on enlightening students of the importance of integrating religion into their lives. Yet, the retreats also stressed the idea of learning who the true person was within oneself.

Also enabling students to integrate religion into their lives, Masses were celebrated everyday in the school chapel. The All Saints Day Mass, the Ash Wednesday Mass, the Mass of the Holy Spirit, the Vocation Awareness Mass, and the Ascension Thursday Mass were celebrated in the school's gymnasium, which enabled the entire school community to become actively involved. Combining Masses, retreats, Vocation Week, and the Rosary League, the school's religious program helped students to realize the importance of religion in everyday living.

Living the Christian life more fully, 25 men at St. Laurence devoted their lives to closely follow Christ through their vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience. Providing Christ-like examples to people that they work with, the Christian Brothers tried to sanctify others and themselves through their prayer life. Before attending Mass in the morning, the Brothers meditated for thirty minutes in the chapel.

In the evening, they prayed for fifteen minutes around suppertime and for five minutes at 10:00 p.m. Besides their common prayer life, the Brothers often prayed in private in order to form a deeper, more intimate relationship with God. Further reflecting on their lives, the Brothers also attended short retreats and days of recollection, as well as making a six day retreat after the schoolyear.

Even though the Christian Brothers spent much of their time praying, they found time to moderate, coach, or advise school activities. The Brothers then spent their remaining time engaging in a hobby. To many Brothers this meant listening to music, watching television, reading, or playing some sport. However, certain Brothers painted, worked with wood, or collected fossils.

Assuring that the Brother's community could focus on instilling Christian values into their work, Superior Br. Wielatz saw to most of their needs. As Superior, Br. Wielatz provided the community with the leadership to live the life of a Christian Brother in the spirit of their vows and their founder.

On October 15th, the Chess Club began practicing for its upcoming season. Moderated by Mr. Smerz, the team practiced for two hours on Mondays, while playing its ten league games on Tuesdays. Practices stressed opening moves, middle game moves, and end game strategy. Although the team was in second place for the first half of the season, the team played inconsistently in its remaining games. Led by captain Mitch Tomaskiewicz, the team concluded its season with a 5-5 record. By placing fourth in the Catholic League, the team earned a playoff berth, however, the team lost to Fenwick in the first round. Even though each match reflected the entire team's performance, Nicholas Rodriguez received a trophy for his individual scoring.

Designed to help students improve upon their mathematical abilities, the Math Club met every Wednesday after school for one-half hour. Each week, students participated in tests sponsored by either the Illinois Mathematics League or the Atlantic-Pacific High School Mathematics League. In addition, several members competed in the North Suburban Math Field Day. Moderated by Mr. Fowler, the Math Club allowed students to apply different mathematical theories, and it also stressed the importance of math in daily activity.

Fun After School

Under the guidance of Mr. Scott, the four members of the Forensics Club competed in the Chicago Forensics League. The club's members participated in two areas of competition: Original Speech and Oral Interpretations of Literature. The club competed at both the varsity and the novice level at all of the competitions. Judging for all events centered around posture, voice, selection of words and the material used. Though no big awards were won, the four members of the club gained the experience needed to assure an ever improving team.

Providing students with access to the ski slopes, the ski club offered students several opportunities to ski at Wilmot Mountain, located in Wisconsin. The club was moderated by Mr. Duslack who made all of the necessary arrangements. All of the trips were held on Fridays and departed for the slopes after school. Assuring that many students could take advantage of the club, the price for transportation and a lift ticket ran from $10 to $13. Yet, students not owning their own equipment were offered another package which ran from $18 to $20. Thus, all students were given every opportunity to enjoy the sport of skiing.

Getting Involved In School

In many ways similar to lawn bowling, bacce-ball, a game deep in Italian culture was introduced to Freshmen by Br. Vranka. Requiring a time span of only thirty minutes, the game had ten, two man teams. Held shortly after school, the game was played with eight black balls (four to a team) and a yellow ball called a jack. First the smaller jack was thrown by a player, with each player having a chance to throw the jack. Then, in sequence each player threw his ball attempting to project it as close to the jack as possible. The game continued in this manner until 18 points were accumulated and victory achieved.

Started two years ago, the Vikings for Christian Service program was organized by Br. Tomkins as an effort to try to help the aged and to spread the Christian spirit. Beginning in November, the program included 32 juniors and seniors who contributed a few hours a week to help the elderly in the Stickney area. Their assistance included painting, shoveling snow, doing general repairs, buying groceries, and other odd jobs. The Stickney Office of the aged provided information on people needing assistance.

In order to honor these students, a special luncheon was held in March. Each student received a certificate and Br. Tomkins received a plaque for organizing the program at St. Laurence. Although credit in Theology was offered, the students mainly helped the aged because of the spiritual fulfillment that they experienced.

Defending The Black And Gold

Working hard, the cheerleaders added enthusiasm and color to the football games, pep rallies, and basketball games. The Golden Girls, under the supervision of Br. Verre, practiced the lively cheers, which they developed themselves. In addition to the two hour practices held every Wednesday evening, the girls also attended a summer camp for cheerleading.

Last spring, a group of ten St. Laurence juniors and the returning members of the squad judged cheerleading tryouts. There, it was decided who would take the place of the graduating members of the squad. Girls from Queen of Peace and Mother McAuley were invited to the try-out. The girls were judged upon their past experience and other gymnastic qualities such as, enthusiasm and gymnastic ability. The ten members of the squad were Peggy Hallberg, Sally Michuda, Sheila Dwyer, Denise Carroll, Sue Cachey, Sheila Lamb, Cathy Sowa, Sandy Childs and Karen Corcoran.

Assisting The School

Raising money for school improvements, the Mothers' Club sponsored many different fund raisers. The annual Fall Fashion Show Luncheon, Spring Dinner Dance, and Faculty Dinner, all resulted from the Club's efforts to raise needed funds.

Under the moderation of Br. McNamara, the Club enabled parents to become actively involved in their son's education. Monthly meetings involved parents in the organization of the club's social events and the general success of the school and the club. At the meetings, upcoming events were planned and past projects were evaluated. The school's faculty was also introduced to the mothers during the course of the year. The May meeting signaled the end of the year and the election of the next year's officers.

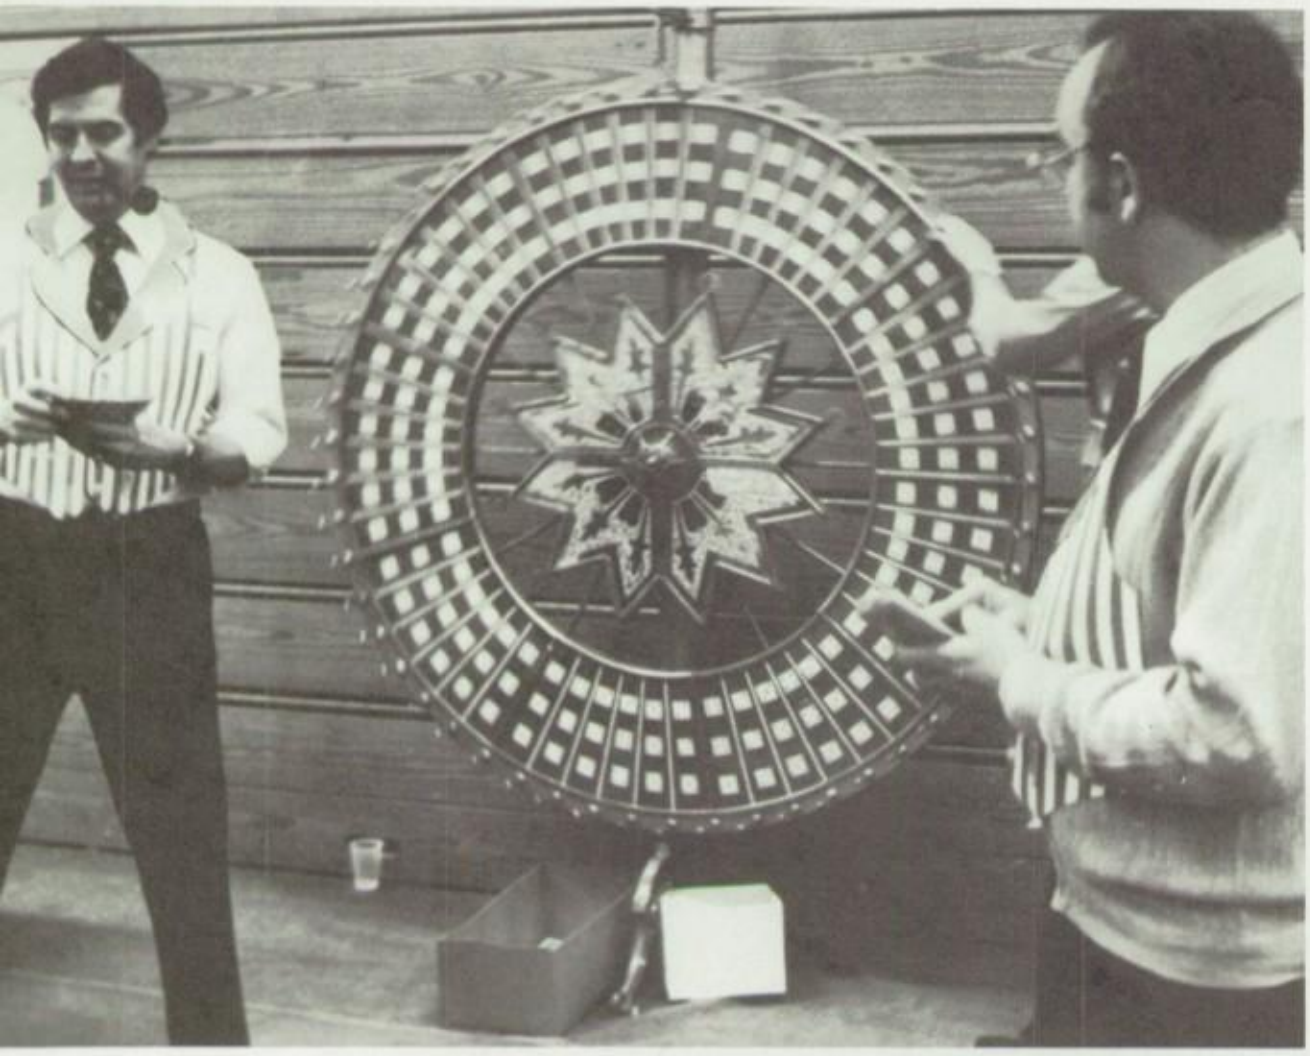
Smoker Alleviates High Costs



Assuming the tuition obligation of a student whose father or guardian died while a member of the organization, the Fathers' Club aided the school in many ways. The club's meetings were held on a monthly basis in order to assure smooth organization. First year moderator Br. Jackson and President George Gustafson directed and supervised the meetings. Treasurer Don Freyerer, Recording Secretary Rich Buch, and Corresponding Secretary Sid Madura further assisted in the organization of meetings. The agenda for most of the meetings included minutes from the previous meeting, as well as treasury, membership, and usher reports.

Following the reports, various forms of entertainment were presented. The type of entertainment largely depended on the time of the year. At the Father and Son Night, the guest speaker was a sports figure. The Mom's and Dad's meeting featured a celebrity look-alike contest. Invitations to the May meeting were extended to all incoming Freshmen and their fathers.

Held on February 9th, the Smoker grossed $68,537. The money was used to pay the tuition of students of deceased Father's Club members and the remainder was given to the school to alleviate high costs.

Brothers Reap Benefits

Composing one of the most unnoticed, but most beneficial clubs in St. Laurence was alumni mothers. These graduates' mothers form a club known as the Laurenta Club. The Laurenta Club assisted in recording and counting Candy Drive returns and also in raising money to aid in the education of Student Brothers at Lewis University. Throughout the year, the club held a number of fund raisers, the most prominent being the taffy apple drive. In addition to this, they sponsored a card and bunco party, and a theatre party. The club also gave all its members a chance to meet other women, while helping others.

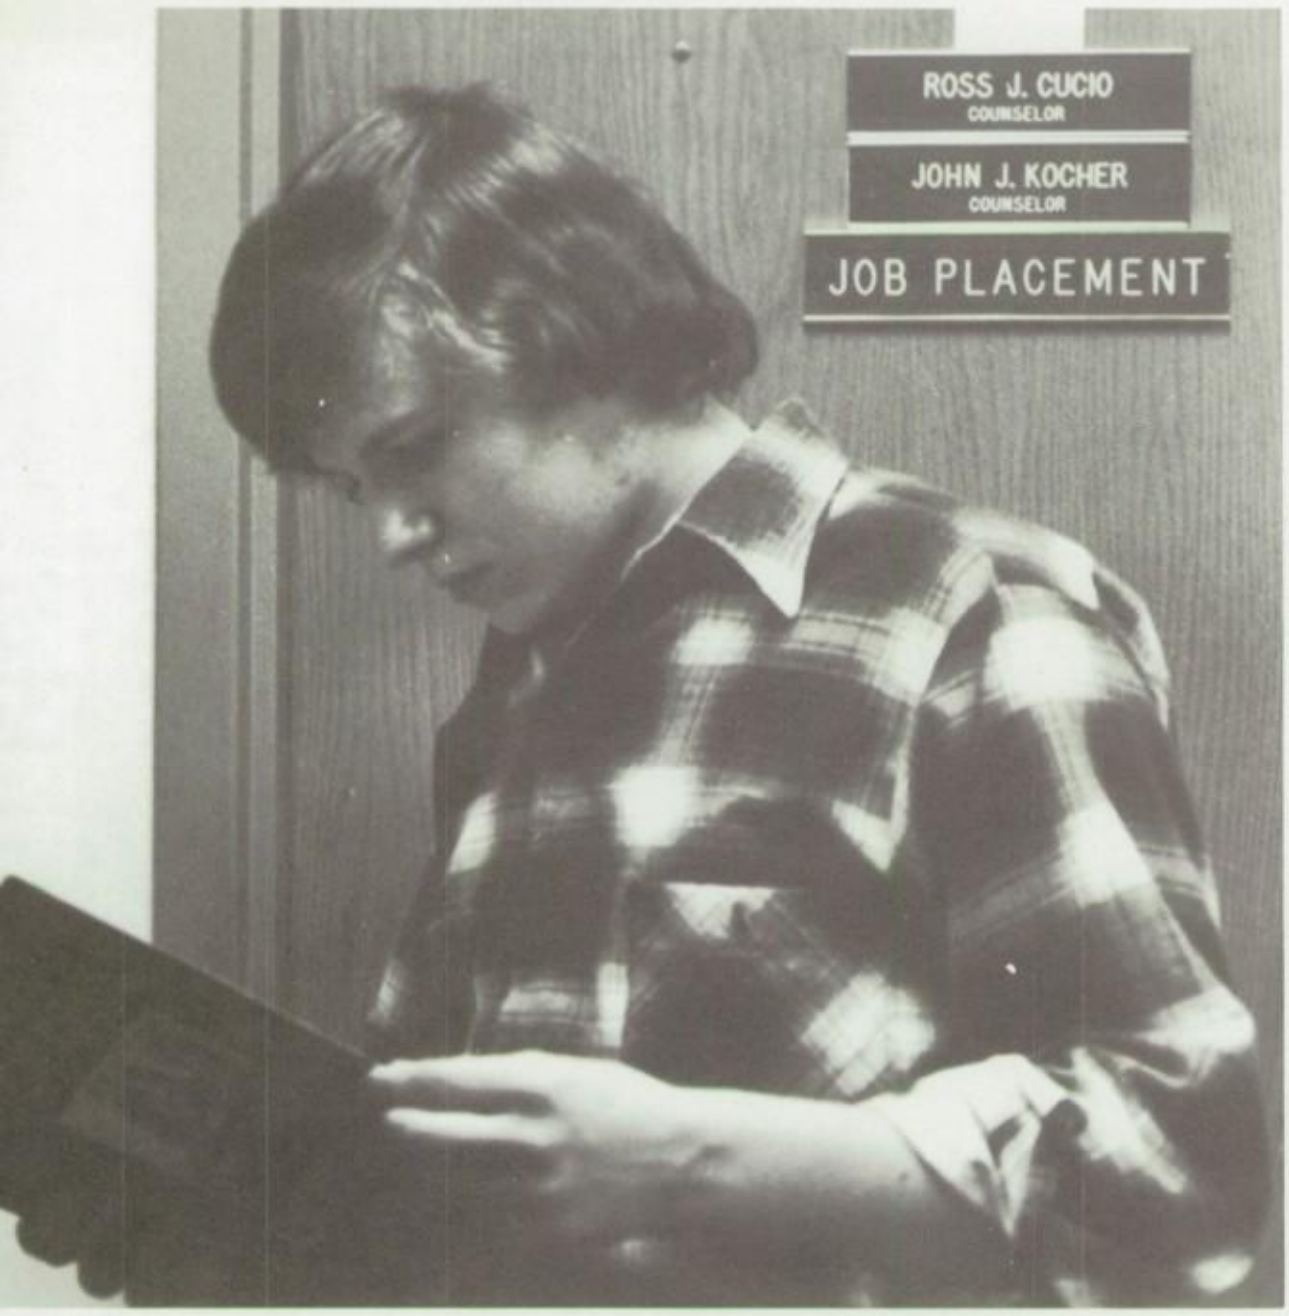
Counselors Aid Students



One of the responsibilities of the Guidance Department was to aid students in their educational endeavors. The department helped students to prepare for college and future careers by sponsoring College Night, Career Night, and arranging college representative's visits. Seniors gained information pertaining to scholarships and financial aid from pamphlets and from Mr. Allegretti, who handled college applications. Br. Jackson informed Juniors about their upcoming tests, which included the ACT, PSAT, and SAT. Mr. Cucio assisted the Sophomores, while Mr. Kocher aided the Freshmen and informed students about job opportunities.

For the first time, Freshmen took the NEDT, which had formerly been taken only by the Sophomores. Utilizing National Honor Society members, the Guidance Department was able to provide tutors for students needing one. The newest addition to the department's responsibilities was the organization of a program to recruit eighth graders.

"Crash" Plays For Sophs

Held on May 24th from 8-11, the Sophomore Date Dance proved to be an enjoyable evening for all. For many sophomores, this was their first formal dance. With the assistance of co-chairman Gerry Hammarlund and Jim Valek, Mr. Scott chose the band, which was "Crash," ordered favors as well as the decorations needed for the dance. Volunteers then spent their time transforming the school's cafeteria into a setting befitting the dance.

Students paid $11.00 to cover the cost of the band, decorations and the favors. Dinner was not served at the dance; thus, many students opted to dine at one of the many elegant area restaurants after the dance. Yet, prior to their departure, the sophomores enjoyed the magical atmosphere created by the dance.

Juniors' Night Out

Held on March 14th, the Junior Ring Dance provided juniors and their date with a night of dining, dancing and an opportunity to be together for a while. Moderated by Mr. Langlotz, the dance was held at the Condesa Del Mar. Chairman Bill Yanahan also provided many vital services in organizing and planning the Junior Ring Dance. After their delicious prime rib dinner, the 110 couples and faculty chaperones were able to dance to the music of the rock band Ziggy. With the night enjoyed by everyone, the theme — "The Closer I Get To You" seemed to fit the dance perfectly.

An Evening Downtown

The Senior Prom, held downtown at the Pick Congress Hotel, began at 7 PM on Friday, May 2nd. The prom provided seniors with an opportunity to meet with their fellow classmates and teachers prior to graduating. Following a prime rib dinner, the couples danced to the music of Rooster and the Revoltionary Swing Orchestra.

After the prom, couples were free to return to school for the post prom where more music was provided by the rock band Ziggy. As a special remembrance of the evening, mugs and wine glasses were given out to all of the couples. On the following day, many seniors continued the fun by venturing on a picnic or visiting Great America.

A Grand Last Hurrah

Four years of intense study culminated for the class of 1980 during the third weekend of May. After much dedication and hard work, many seniors began "Graduation Week" by attending the optional Graduation Mass-Dinner. Held at St. Alberts, the Mass enabled seniors to share with their friends and family the experience of graduation. After the mass the students and families commuted over to St. Laurence where they enjoyed dinner with their parents and fellow classmates. The dinner provided the soon to be graduates with what could have been one last time to be among their fellow seniors in an informal atmosphere.

With that step in graduating over, seniors had one last hurdle: the actual graduation ceremony for which Mr. Mahoney was the Master of Ceremonies. This year, as in the past, the commencement exercises took place downtown at Medinah Temple. After the band performed the National Anthem, Mitch Tomaskiewicz, the salutatorian, delivered his speech which called for seniors to thank their parents and the faculty. Following Mitch's speech, Br. MacIntyre delivered his address. Br. MacIntyre's farewell address was then followed by the presentation of diplomas to graduates. After all of the diplomas were handed out, Br. McIntyre awarded 21 special medals to 18 different seniors. Concluding the ceremony, valedictorian Dan Dennehy made a moving presentation. With the band performing, the class of 1980 made its final exit and headed out into the future world.

Service Marks Lives

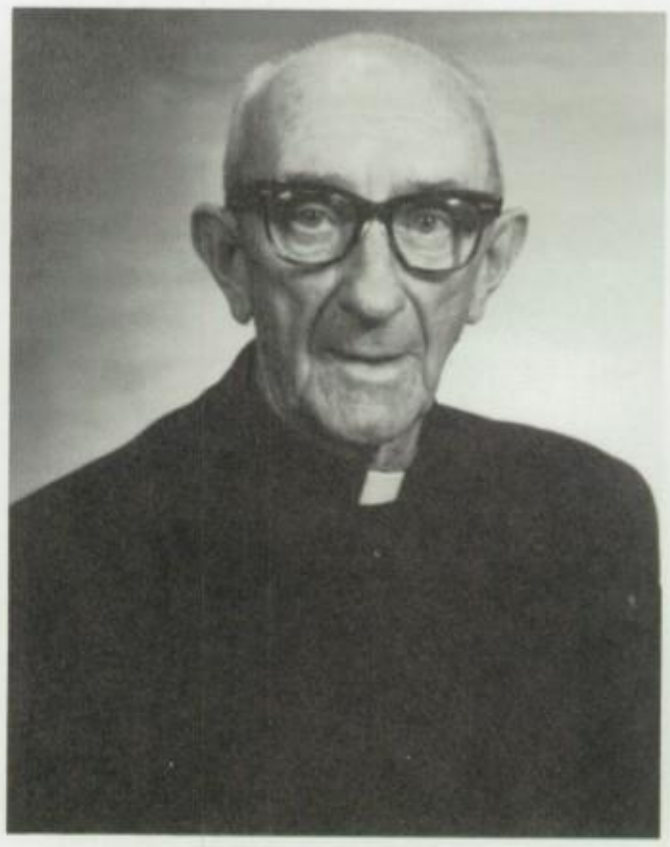
Twelve years of service at St. Laurence ended for Br. Conefrey with his untimely death this past summer.

Born on March 8th, 1925 in Greenwich, Connecticut, he spent his childhood years growing up in the city of his birth. He graduated from Greenwich High School in 1942, the same year that he decided to join the Christian Brothers.

After receiving his training, he spent his early teaching years at various Christian Brothers schools in New York. Gaining in experience and faith, he took his final vows of chastity, poverty, and obedience in 1951.

From 1958 to 1961, Br. Conefrey taught at Br. Rice High School located in Chicago. In 1962, he was transferred to St. Laurence, where he taught for seventeen years.

While assigned to St. Laurence, he taught English and also Theology. Spreading his desire of goodwill, he moderated the Intramural and Varsity Bowling Leagues and served as the Valhallan's advisor for a number of years. Then in 1973, Br. Conefrey was appointed Superior of the St. Laurence Brothers Community. Upon his death, his friends were able to pay their last respects to him in the St. Laurence Chapel.



On December 4th, 1979, eighty-two year old Br. James Collins died after a prolonged illness. He had been born in Bristol, England on April 19th, 1898. Before joining the Christian Brothers on March 23, 1913 in Marino, Ireland, Br. Collins had attended college in England. Once becoming a Brother, he taught for ten years in Ireland.

In 1924, he received his first North American teaching position. After teaching in Nova Scotia and in Newfoundland, he was transferred to Leo High School in Chicago in 1931. While at Leo High School, he devoted much time to the organization of a school band. After 13 years at Leo, Br. Collins was transferred to New York, where he spent 11 years teaching at three different schools.

In 1954, he returned to Leo High School, remaining there until 1963, when he was transferred to Br. Rice High School in Birmingham, Michigan. After a one year stay at Br. Rice, he was then transferred to St. Laurence High School in 1964. While at St. Laurence, he taught mechanical drawing, drafting, art, and Theology. Besides his formal education, Br. Collins was also a qualified carpenter. After retiring, Br. Collins spent his remaining year living in the St. Laurence Brothers Community.

Assuring Efficiency

Spending most of their time in the front-office, Principal Br. MacIntyre and Vice-Principal Mr. Mahoney planned the entire operation of our school. Overseeing every move, Br. MacIntyre had the head of every department make a periodic report to him. After evaluating these reports, Br. MacIntyre could make any needed adjustments to assure that the school's academic program continued its excellence. Besides having to direct the school's operation, Br. MacIntyre also taught the French IV class. Serving in his last year as principal at St. Laurence, Br. MacIntyre, as well as Mr. Mahoney served on the National Honor Society's Executive Board.

Also playing a major role in the school's operation, Mr. Mahoney had many duties. Besides his every day duty of reading the announcements, he handled student scheduling, orientation, graduation, and also assigned teachers to cover for absent instructors. Whenever a press release needed to be given to the Archdiocese, Mr. Mahoney made sure that it was quickly sent out. Though neither of these men were often seen in the academic section of the school, their presence was truly felt in all of the school's programs.

Tackling The Tasks

Aside from the academic functions provided by the faculty, more subtle services were performed by the other members of the St. Laurence work staff. These services were equally important to the efficiency of the school.

The individuals who worked in the front office handled the different aspects of administration. Mrs. Henning, the school's registrar, handled and organized the paperwork involved in running the school: the various student rosters, academic records and transcripts as well as other official documents. Mrs. J. McCarthy, the school accountant, kept track of the school's budget and financial needs. The school treasurers were Mrs. P. McCarthy and Br. McNamara. They made sure that all of the school's bills were paid, and they also handled the student's tuitions. Mrs. Dreyer, the school secretary, assisted Br. MacIntyre and the Deans in carrying out their duties as school supervisors. Mrs. Kelly was the school's receptionist; she answered the absentee calls, took messages, and made certain that arrangements were carried out for the school.

The women who worked in the Audio-Visual Center helped the faculty perform their duties as teachers. Mrs. Statkus typed and processed tests, sports programs, religious pamphlets, and other printed materials. Mrs. Quilty ordered the various films and supplies that were needed. She also handled and ordered the various A-V equipment.

St. Laurence also employed a rather large janitorial staff headed by Mr. Blakemore. These janitors handled the physical needs of the school. Their jobs included the maintenance of the building, the sufficiency of heat during the winter, and the cleanliness of the school inside as well as outside. These custodians also prepared the school for any extracurricular activities that took place.

In addition, a sizeable student janitorial staff worked after school to help maintain the cleanliness of the classrooms. They also swept the floors and halls, dusted chalkboards, and cleaned the desks.

The ladies who worked in the cafeteria also provided an essential service to hungry students. Under the direction of manager Shirley Ficaro, the women prepared different menus for the three lunch periods, made sure that there were sufficient quantities of food, kept the cafeteria clean, and supervised the food lines.

The school nurse, Mrs. Cegielski, formulated the absentee rosters every school day throughout the year. She also organized the Freshman physicals and made sure that each student met the proper requirements set by the Illinois Department of Health before he entered school. The nurse was also available to alleviate any injury or illness that may have had occurred during the year.

Integrating Religion Into Life

Top: After reading a selection from the Bible, Br. Mahoney asks a student for his interpretation. Bottom: Responding to a student's question, Br. Reilly relates the Jewish idea of the Messiah to his freshman students.

Essential to its founding as a Catholic learning institution, St. Laurence required all students to have had completed four years of theological instruction prior to graduating. Designed to aid the student in leading a Christian life and achieving a fuller understanding of his religion, theology covered topics ranging from the Old Testament to today's moral problems.

Freshmen, beginning with Christianity's basics, engaged in a study of the Old Testament, and eventually covered Jesus' life and the coming of the Messiah.

Already possessing knowledge of the Old Testament, Sophomores delved into a study of the New Testament. Analyzing each individual Gospel, students acquired an understanding of different types of interpretations, discussed the Gospel's validity, and discovered the writers' contradictions in accounts dealing with the same incident.

Divided into two one semester courses, Juniors studied the history of the Church, and they were introduced to morality. Starting with the Church's growth in Europe, the course concluded with the modern American Church. Basic principles involved in morality and simple ethical problems helped scratch the surface of morality, preparing Juniors for the more complex senior course.

Ending their years at St. Laurence, Seniors studied sexuality and complex moral problems in society. Study of the whole human being, with some consideration to marriage, constituted the sexuality course. In the advanced moral problems course, proper theological principles were applied to complex topics. Ranging from nuclear warfare to bio-medical problems, peace to poverty, and politics to artificial insemination, the morality course rounded the student's Christian education.

Representative of the student's Christian values, daily mission collections amassed large sums. The collected money alleviated the financial burden of the three Peruvian mission schools and two Peruvian Brother's training houses.

Effectively Communicating

Along with increasing a student's appreciation of literature, English teachers strove to help their students develop skills in reading. Furthermore, teachers instructed their students to think logically and write effectively. Teachers encouraged each student to improve upon his existing writing ability in order to form his own unique style of writing.

Freshmen engaged in two or three different types of English courses. In their regular English classes, Freshmen studied grammar and literature, while building their vocabulary; they were also introduced to the fundamentals of composition and various literary genres. The mandatory Reading course attempted to improve a student's study skills, reading comprehension, reading rate, as well as the ability to enjoy and comprehend various types of reading materials. By opting to take English Arts as an elective, students further strenghened their skills in composition and speech while also increasing their vocabulary.

The Sophomore English course reviewed and expanded upon the ideas that were taught in English I. However, the course emphasized literature and composition more than the pure mechanics of the language. Assigned more outside readings, Sophomores read a variety of works to augment their understanding of literature.

While briefly reviewing mechanics, Juniors surveyed American literature during the various literary periods: Puritanism, Neo-Classism, Romanticism, Naturalism, and Impressionism. In the honors classes, emphasis was placed on developing a student's reasoning powers and on introducing a student to the symbolism in poetry as well as in other forms of literature. Juniors were required to write a term paper. Thus, teachers hoped that their students would develop skills in finding and using library materials, while integrating them into their own ideas and writing their thoughts in a clear and understandable manner.

As Seniors, students basically studied a wide assortment of works by British authors. The review of mechanics was mainly accomplished through writing assignments. In the honors classes, both reading and writing were emphasized. Ten outside readings were assigned to stimulate a student's appreciation of literature. In order to develop their own individual writing style, these students completed eleven short papers each quarter for three quarters. In addition to writing two term papers, students participated in debates which introduced them to the fundamentals of oral communication. Seniors were also able to take Creative Writing as an elective. The course stressed the development of skill and style in narrative writing as well as in the art of self-expression. At the completion of four years of English students were able to reason clearly and write creatively while appreciating the effort put into a good piece of literature.

Ancient And Present

Lending students an opportunity to venture back into our past, freshman World History centered around ancient civilization. The course began with a survey of the earliest records of man and a thorough investigation of the Greek and Roman times. After gaining a firm knowledge of these ancient societies, the student ventured into European history and finished with a thorough study of 19th and 20th century cultures.

Taken as a sophomore elective, Modern European History presented students with a thorough insight into the 19th and 20th centuries. Though covered in World History, European History was again studied, though more emphasis was placed on the period immediately following the 1789 French Revolution. This knowledge allowed students to make a smoother transition into junior year history.

In junior year, United States history was entirely reviewed. The course began with Colonial times and ended with the present. Throughout the year, the students attempted to historically theorize the reasons that institutions and traditions developed the way they did. Emphasis was placed on the Revolutionary War, Civil War and both World Wars. A complete review of the United States governmental procedures and branches also played an important role in the student's total education in history.

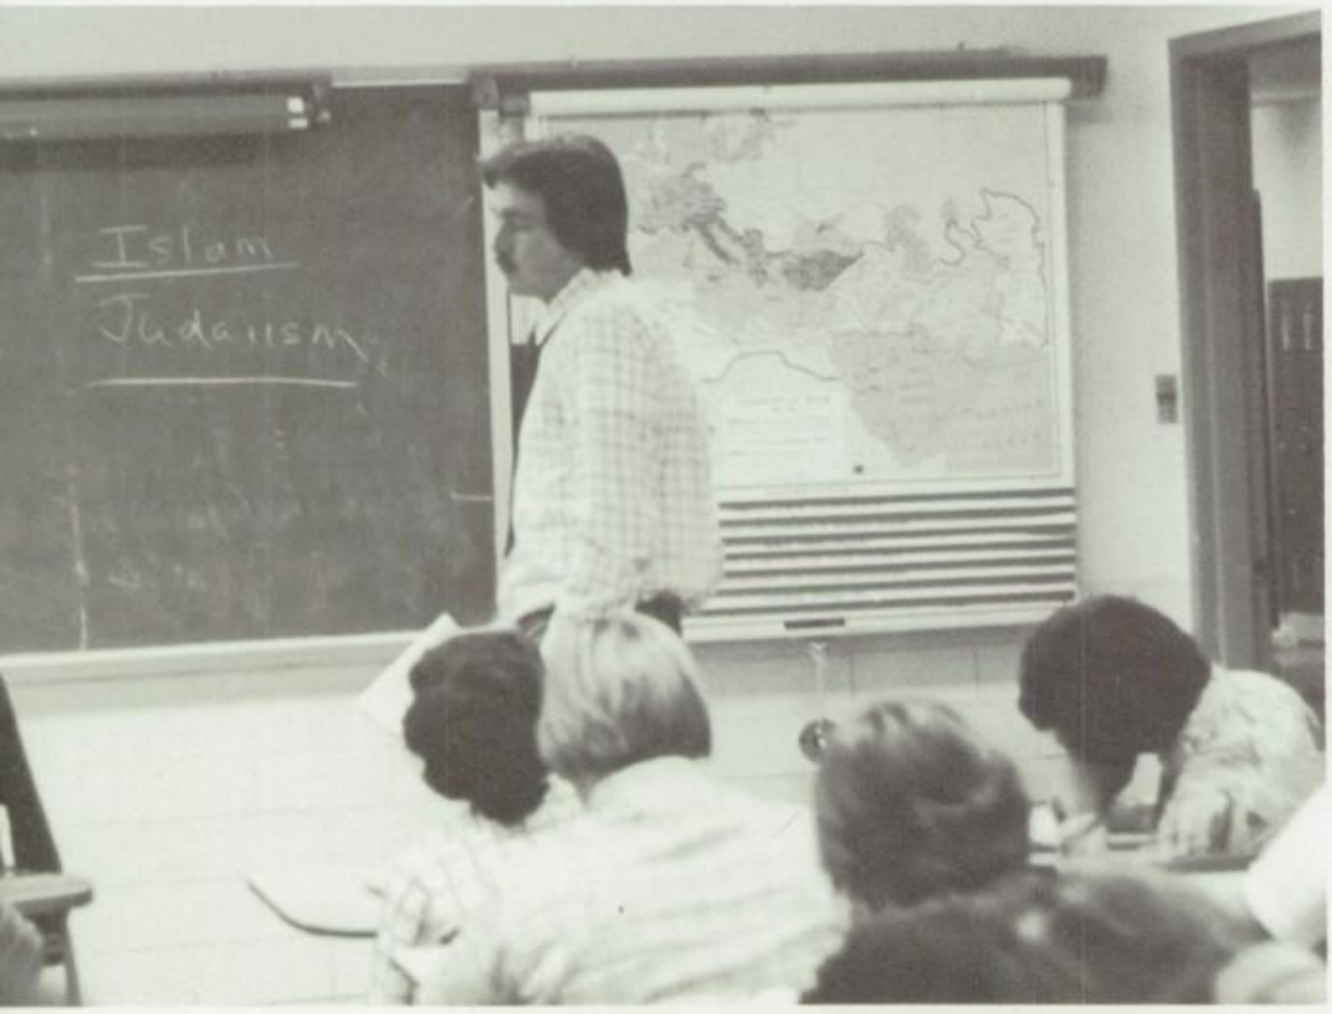
Times Examined



can Government was taken as an elective. The History part of the senior course explored the social and economic developments of the Progressive period, the 1920's and the Depression. The World Wars and the Cold War periods were also covered in the Contemporary American History course. Using a topical approach, the teachers equipped students with fundamental theoretical concepts and structural knowledge of American Government. The course stressed the origin and development of American Government through historical analysis and contemporary examples. After completing both courses, the student thoroughly understood the history of the U.S. as well as the procedures behind the operation of its government. Yet, students were not limited to historical classes if they wished to explore mankind.

Also taken as a senior elective, Sociology/Psychology centered around studying human relationships. Topics included crime, gun control, teenage runaways, drugs, alcoholism, divorce, family, suicide, and high school education. Both courses concentrated deeply on all these topics and attempted to develop solutions to these problems. With a four year history program provided, students could combine the sociology/psychology course with the history program and better learn the basic reasons and patterns of man's behavior.

Future Hemmingways

The senior Creative Writing course, taught by Mr. Kroc, established a new and innovative type of academic atmosphere. The course provided the students with an introduction into the literary world of fiction. After covering the basic rudiments of writing, the students were required to write a number of fictional stories. In order to foster creativity, the students were not limited in their choice of subject material.

Having the student's work evaluated and partially graded by the entire class proved to be a unique grading system. First, the entire class discussed and reviewed the different elements of each story. Once hearing the class's critiques and grade, Mr. Kroc and the class arrived at a suitable grade. Since educating students well enough to publish material was the course's goal, the grading system's goal attempted to reflect the procedures followed in the industry. In the literary field, success was based on audience reaction, just as a student's grade depended upon the class's reaction. Thus, the course succeeded in closely resembling the publication industry, as well as preparing the students for the literary field.

Exploring Life

During their sophomore year, all students were required to participate in the biology program. The course centered around giving students an understanding of the world of organisms. Mr. Draski, Mr. Kosiek, Mr. Langlotz, and Br. Verre all used basically the same methods to teach the essentials of biology.

The honors classes consisted of a comprehensive investigation orientated program which stimulated the students' creativity and interest. Br. Verre emphasized the study of humans, other organisms, facts, theories, research, and investigative research. In order to teach all of the areas, class time was divided into discussion, lab work, demonstrations, movies, filmstrips, and magazine readings.

The other levels of the program dwelled on the study of the cell theory, tissues, organs, ecosystems, genetics, evolution, and ecology. While teaching these things, instructors placed an emphasis on the relationships between the individual and his environment. Teachers then utilized lab experiments and investigations to reinforce all of the students' knowledge besides giving students a better understanding of the world around them, the course also prepared students for the chemistry and physics courses in future years.

Sciences Focus

Giving the student a glimpse of chemistry in the world today and its relation to society, Chemistry classes projected concepts through a variety of mediums. Even though much of the teaching was accomplished by lecture, movies and presentations, individually performed labs also played an essential role in the learning process. The year began with a study of Avegadro's mole concept, the use of the Periodic Table, along with relations involving mass, volume, and pressure. As the year continued, new concepts such as equilibrium, writing and balancing chemical equations, as well as acid-base titrations were introduced. However, these new topics were all built upon the early year studies.

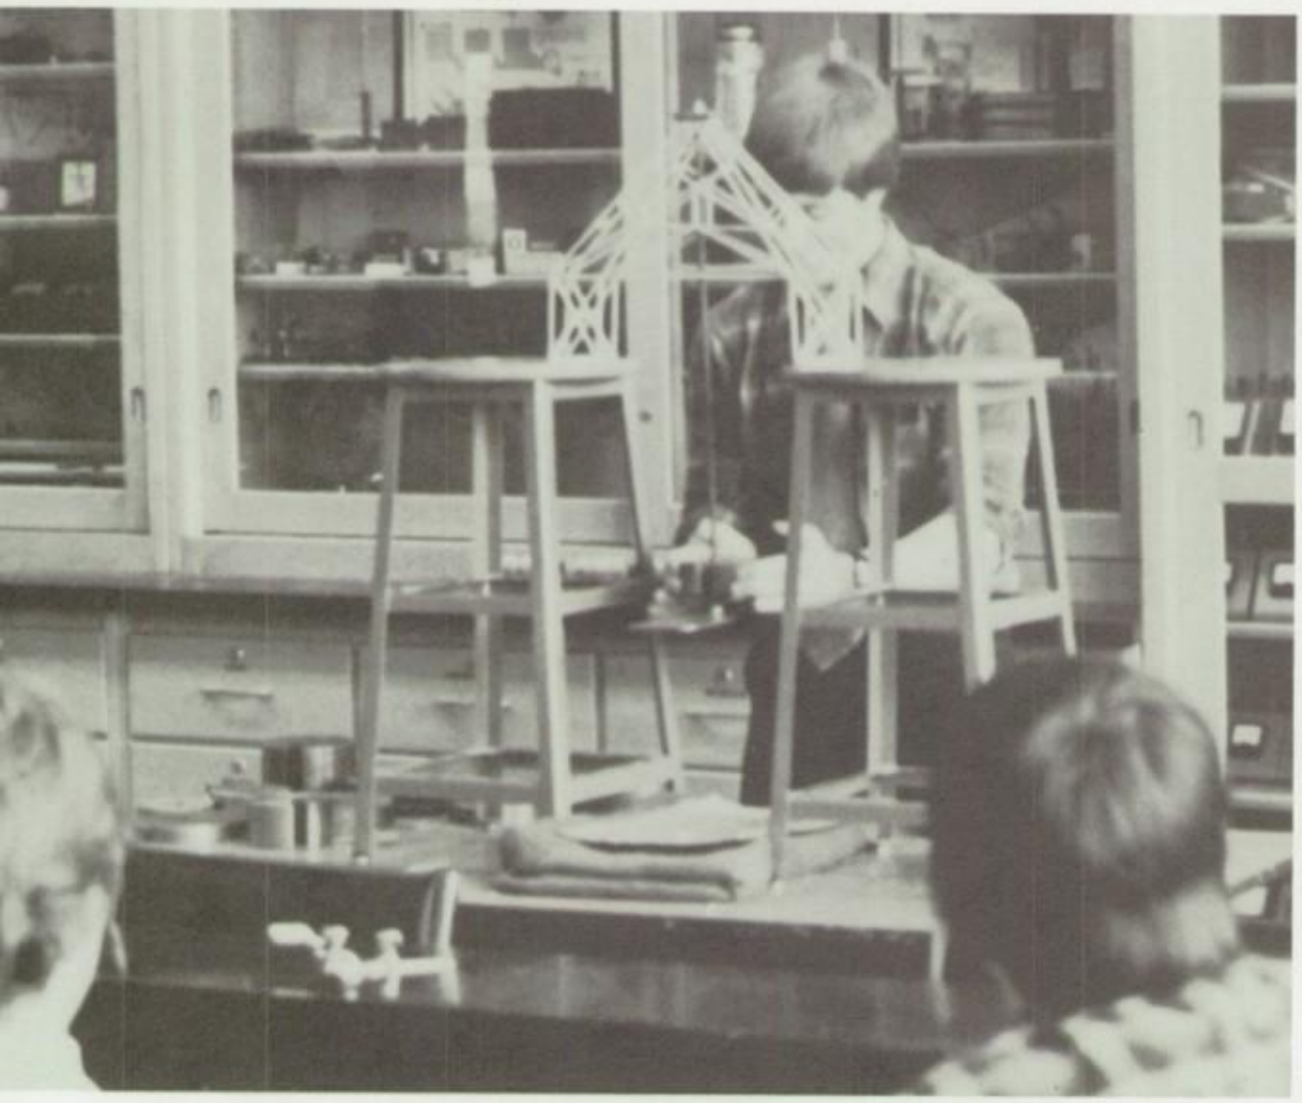
Chemical Industry Week highlighted the year. During this week, speakers came in and related the professions and job opportunities open in the chemical field to the students. The students also produced their own solid deodorant sticks during this week.

In addition to teaching Juniors Inorganic Chemistry Br. Wielatz and Br. Fagan offered an evening Organic Chemistry class for the first time. The class, which included 15 two-hour sessions, was offered to Seniors who were presently enrolled in Physics and had already taken Chemistry in their junior year. Given exposure to nomenclature and molecular structure involved in Carbon-Chemistry, students received one-fourth of a credit.

After completing the course in Chemistry, the student was more knowledgeable about the importance that Chemistry plays in everyday life.

Top: As Mike Pryzdia records the temperature of the solution, Paul Potocki performs the next step in the lab's procedure.
Bottom: As Tony Paterno reads aloud, the other members of the Organic Chemistry class follow in their textbooks.

On Daily Life



Introducing students to the science of Physics, Br. O'Donnell and Br. Reilly focused on stressing the importance of Physics in day to day life. Learning the foundation of the course, students spent a great deal of time thoroughly studying the area of mechanics. Afterwards, students applied their knowledge of mechanics to the topics of heat, sound, light, optics, electricity, magnetism, and atomic theory. After completing each section, students were assigned problems designed to reinforce the ideas mentioned during the lectures. Frequent labs motivated the interest of students by providing practical applications of lecture and problem sessions.

Applying the formulas and theories to common experiences, many students constructed bridges from balsa wood. In order to build sturdy bridges, students had to utilize the rules of mechanics dealing with vectors, stress, and equilibrium.

Approximately 200 students took Physics in their senior year; thus Physics was one of the largest electives offered by the school. Drawing students into a relatively difficult course, Physics prepared students for the field of science or engineering in college.

Bottom Right: In the beginning of the year, labs stressed observation and recognizing physical changes. While Mike Casey reads the temperature, Dan McDonald checks to see if all the solid has dissolved.

Exploring The

Taught by Mr. McNicholas, German was offered at three different levels: freshman, sophomore, and junior years. This year marked the first year that a third year of the language could be taken. In the course, Mr. McNicholas stressed the practical applications of German and the culture of Germany. During the course of the year, students wrote their own menus and in order to improve their speaking ability, the students performed short skits.

Also taught by Mr. McNicholas, Russian could only be taken in senior year. The course introduced students to the basic grammar and vocabulary of the language, as well as introducing them to the Russian lifestyle.

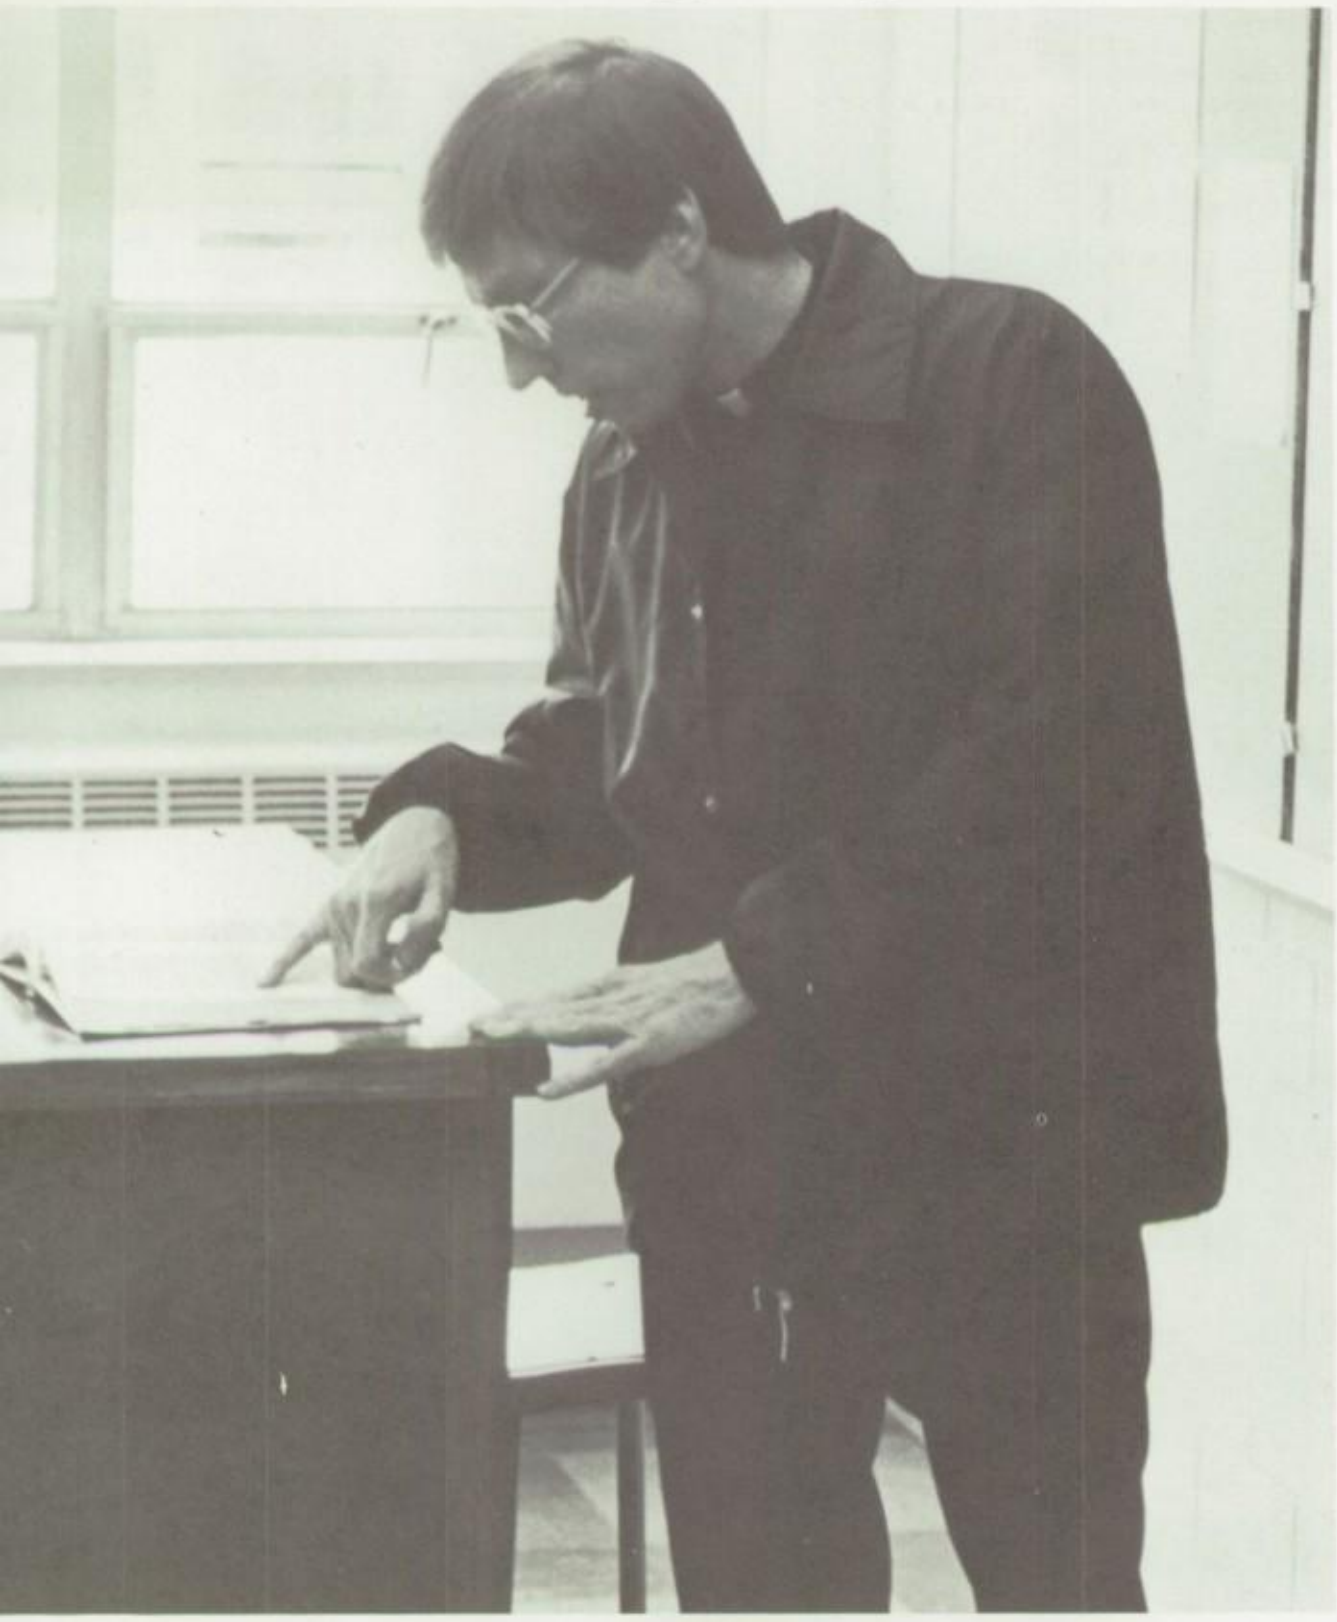
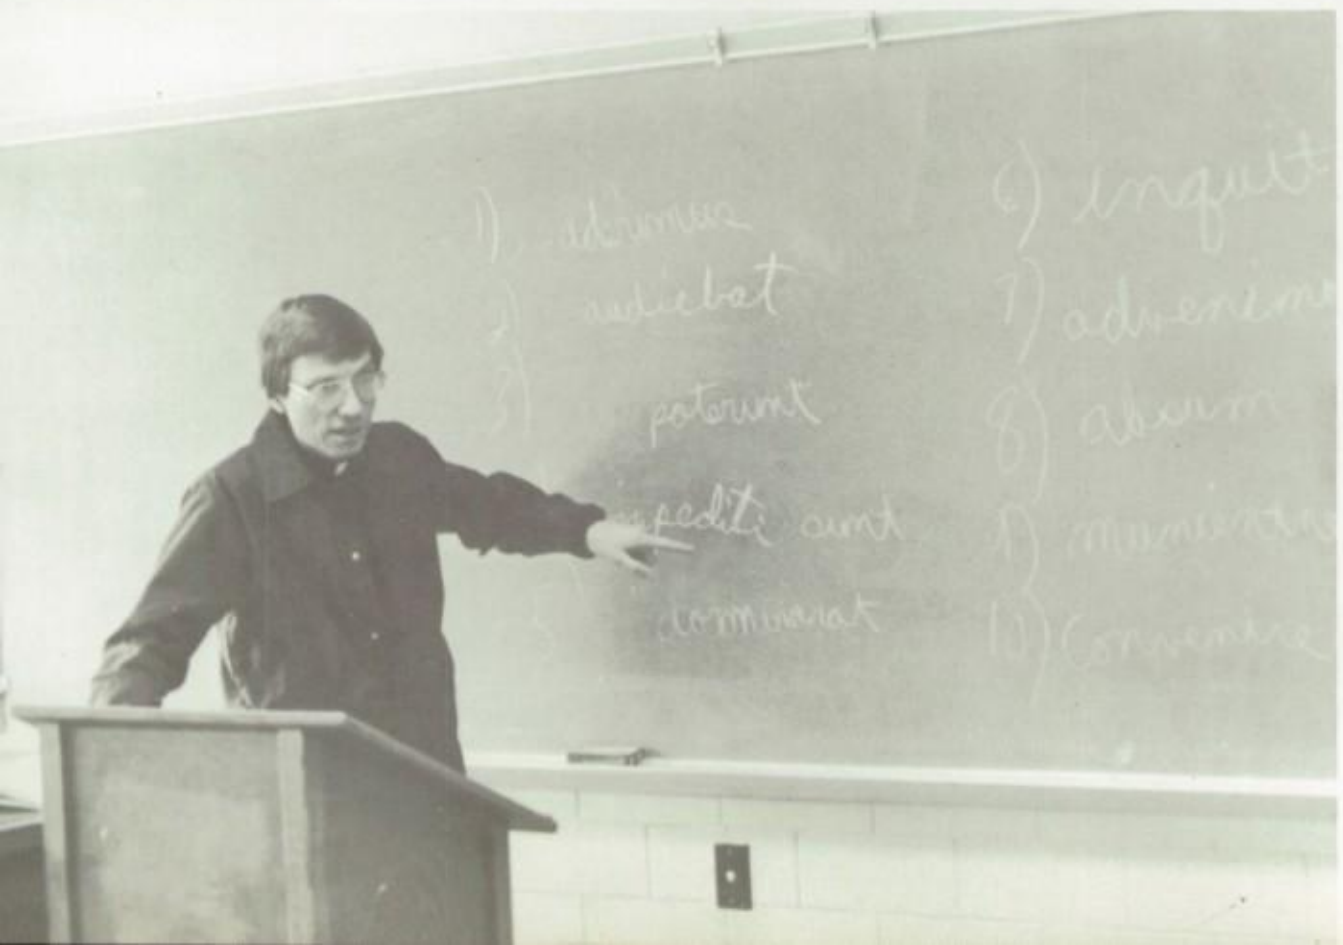
Exotic Languages





Freshman year Latin, taught by Br. Treacy, began with an introduction into basic grammar and vocabulary skills. During the course of the year students also studied simple reading and began translation exercises. The students also began to learn the basic culture and history of ancient Rome.

Second year Latin, basically followed the guidelines begun in freshman year, though more emphasis was placed on grammar. The students better grammar skills assisted them in the understanding of Caesar's Gallic Wars, which was translated during the second semester.

Intended for students who wished to make career in some area of writing, third year Latin emphasized how the Latin language has affected English. Virgil's Aeneid was studied along with an introduction into the treatment of poetic scansion. Along with the emphasis on poetic scansion, students were trained to recognize Latin structural figures and the language's literary figures.

Fourth year Latin continued to improve the student's mastery of English expression. The course reviewed Latin declensions and conjugation forms, as well as completing Virgil's Books IV and VI. Other famous works, contained in the Latin III text were also studied the remainder of the year.

Languages Stress Communication

Founded on the basic idea of one person trying to communicate with another person, the Spanish language was taught by teachers who employed a variety of teaching methods. In freshman year, students taking Spanish learned the basics of the language: pronunciation, elementary idioms, basic grammatical structures, and some verb conjugations in conjunction with a stress on listening skills. Freshmen were also introduced to the aspects of both the Spanish and Latin American cultures. Second year Spanish students refined and expanded the concepts that they had learned in freshman year. However, a greater emphasis was placed on reading and writing skills.

Taking Spanish as an elective, Juniors expanded the use of the language beyond limits of the textbook. The worlds of business, advertising, and newspaper writing were all explored by the students. The student also became acquainted with the leading figures of Spanish and Latin American history, as well as both area's literature. Completing the course, Seniors studied the artworks of Goya, El Greco, Picasso, and Orozco by way of filmstrips and readings. At the end of four years, a student was fully prepared for college level Spanish courses.

By having freshmen first introduced to the spoken word, teachers helped freshmen to naturally learn the basics of the French language. After being thoroughly exposed to the spoken word, the freshmen learned to comprehend the French language much the same way that we learned English as children. Thus, freshmen were familiar with the teaching methods continued in sophomore year. Again, the spoken word played a major role, but reading, writing, and grammar were also taught to the sophomores. In both years a study of the French culture was integrated into the class.

Taking French III as an elective, juniors again practiced speaking and comprehension, but also thoroughly reviewed French grammar. Also playing a major role in the third year, cultural information was taught to the juniors. Seniors, also taking the course as an elective, delved further into the cultural aspects of the language, as well as reading various outside literary works. Grammar again was stressed, with the year's study culminating in a trip to the Chicago Art Institute. After four years of intense study, students had the knowledge necessary to take the College Board Achievement Test in French.

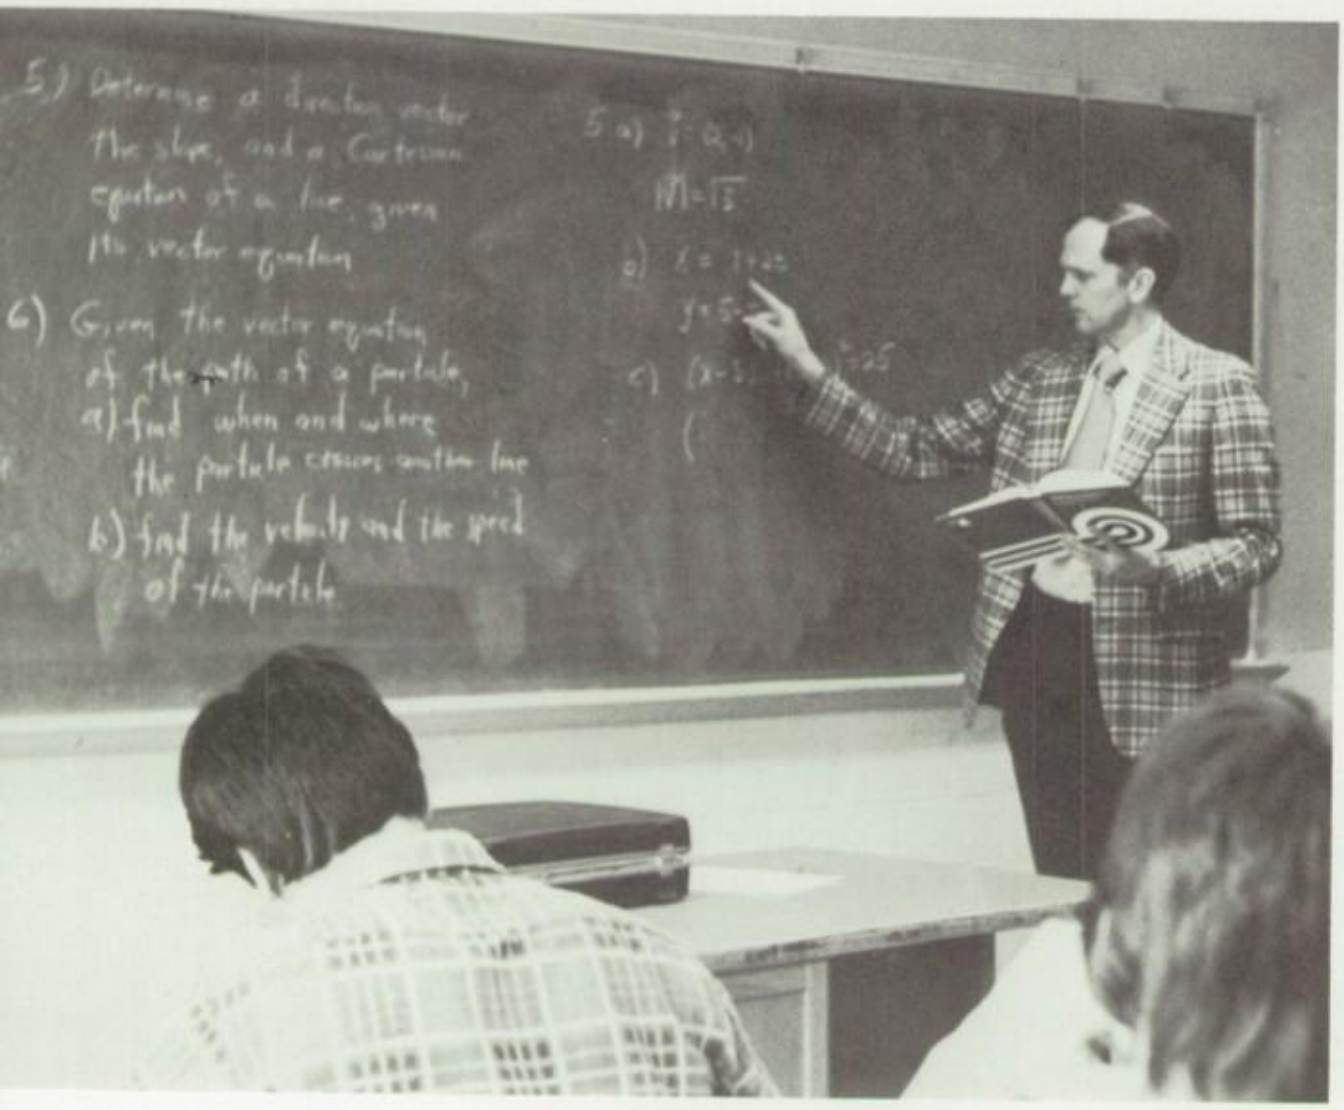
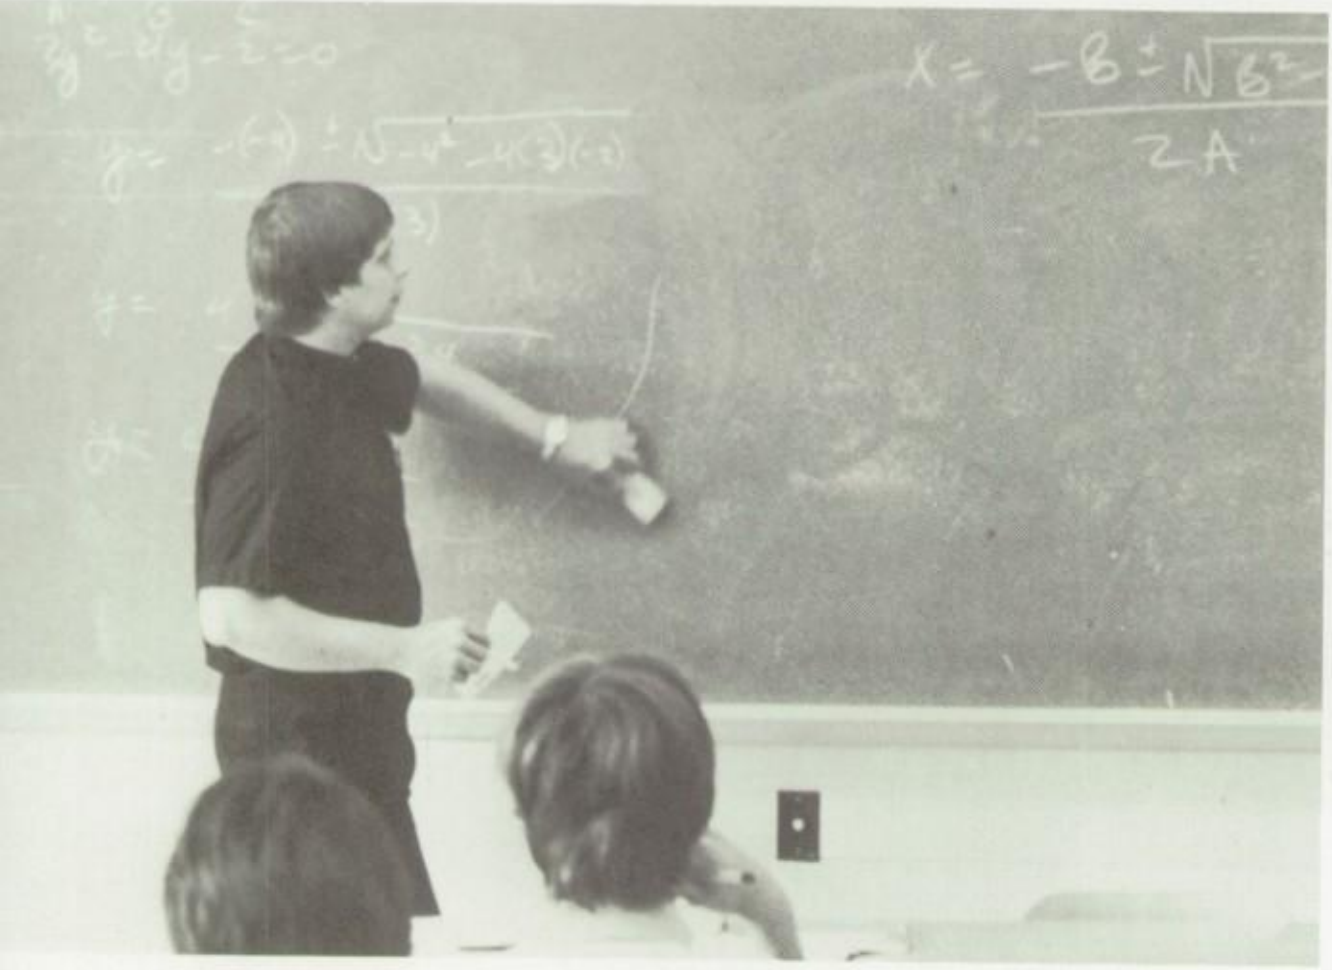
More Than Just Numbers





Offering a wide variety of courses, the Math Department stressed a thorough comprehension of the different mathematical concepts. In freshman year, students acquired a solid knowledge of the fundamentals of Algebra. In the honors course, students not only learned the fundamentals but also studied more advanced topics. However, any student who mastered the basics of Algebra in elementary school took Algebra I and II as well as Trigonometry. As sophomores, students used deductive reasoning to investigate the relationships involving lines, polygons, and circles in geometry. Students then examined geometric principles by utilizing the coordinate plane and ordered pairs of real numbers. Offered to those students who wished to further expand their mathematical knowledge, Trigonometry concentrated on graphing equations, factoring, logarithms, trigonometric functions and identities, as well as a general study of the real number system. Seniors had the option of taking Mathematical Analysis. The course delved into the study of the real number system, sequences, series, vectors, polynomial functions, circular functions, and trigonometric functions. Culminating the mathematical investigational process, some Seniors took Calculus. Students studied the concepts of the limit, the derivative, the integral, and various functions: polynomial, trigonometric, logarithmic, exponential in addition to a few special functions. After completing the course, students understood the theories behind the various mathematical concepts.

Drawing As A Career

Basic principles involved in drafting, which overlap in the fields of engineering and architecture, were introduced to juniors and seniors in Fundamentals of Drafting. Taught by Mr. Engler, the class gave students a look at what a draftsman does, how to draw pictorials from orthographic views and how to apply all of the knowledge gained to each drawing completed. Many of the projects included drawing different types of tools and simple machines.

Open only to those seniors who had previously taken Fundamentals of Drafting, Advanced Technical Drawing provided students with a more in depth study of drafting. Geared towards the students who were seriously considering going into the field of drafting or architecture, the class focused on two main areas. During the first semester the class basically consisted of pictorial drawings, the remainder of the year the class delved into architecture and the drawing of a house.

Examining Musical Elements

Taken in junior year as an elective, Music Theory I examined the fundamentals of the elements of music: tone, melody, harmony, time, and texture. Taught by Mr. Leo Henning, the course also introduced students to form, harmony and arranging, score reading, and basic conducting.

Students who took Music Theory I were then eligible to take Music Theory II. The course concentrated on Triads, Inversions, introduction to modulation and stressed harmonic analysis. The course, designed for more advanced concepts of theory and techniques, also exposed students to ear training, keyboard harmony, and the history of music.

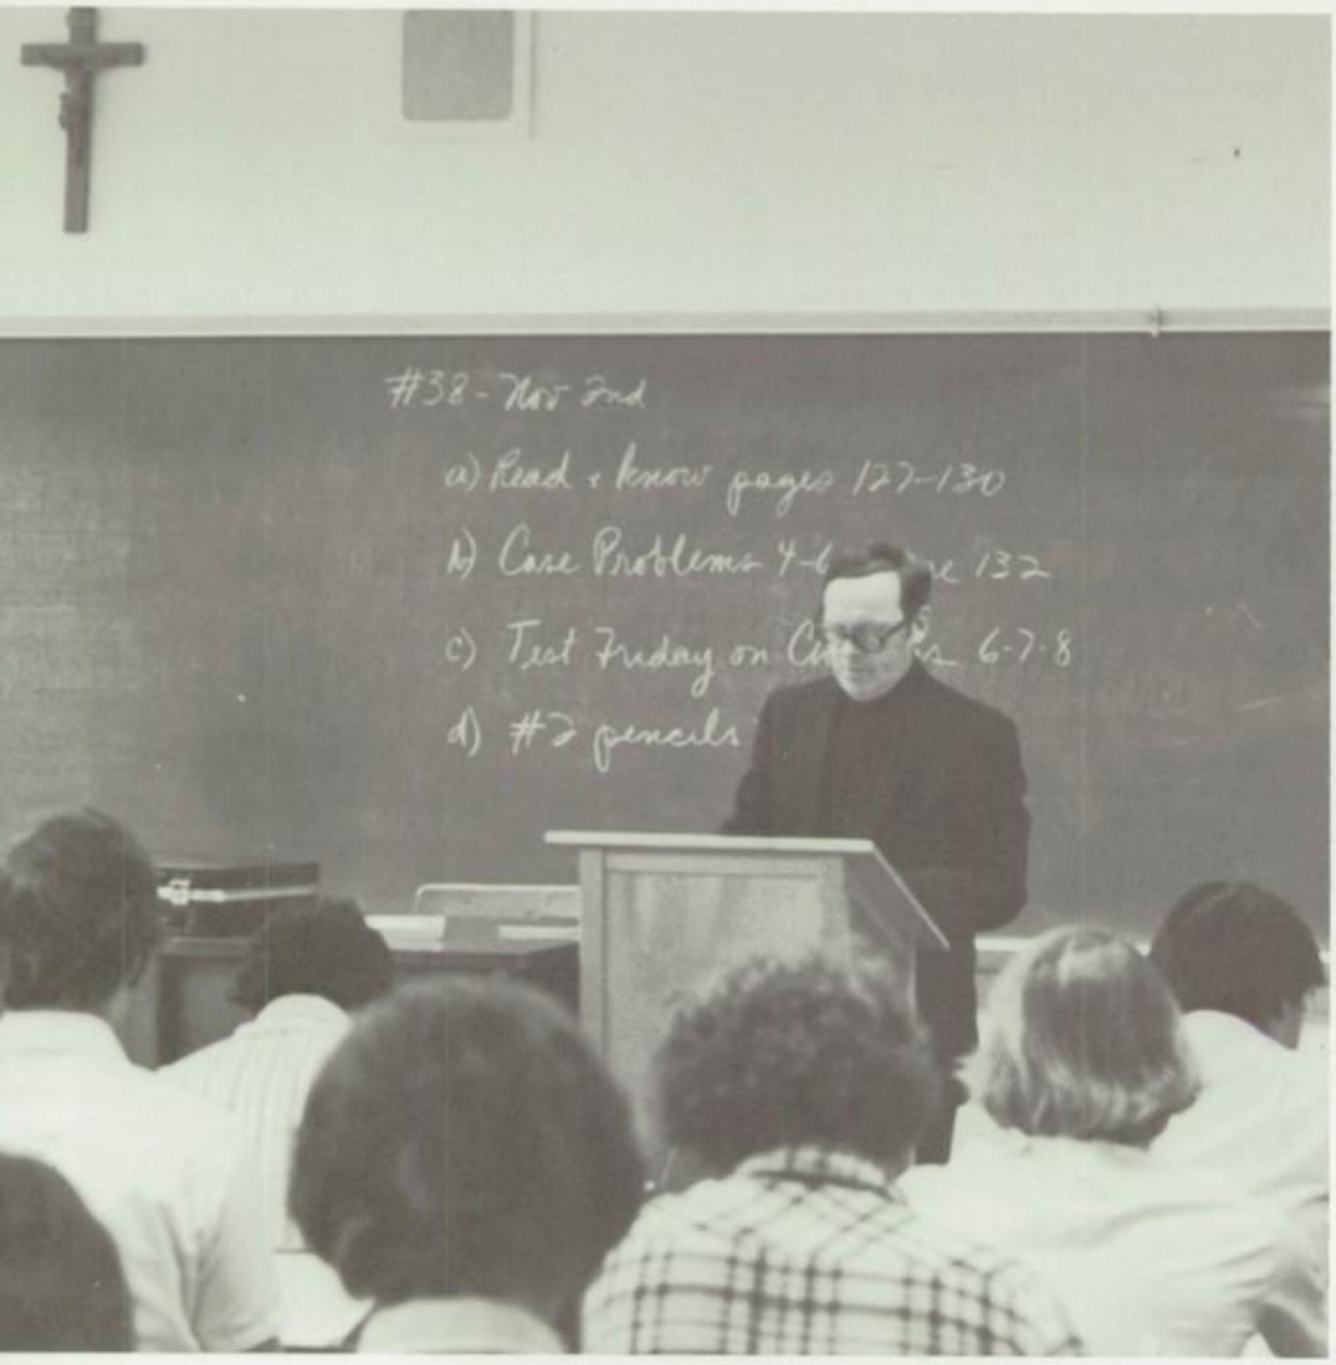
Variety Of Courses



Designed to accommodate a variety of interests, the Business Department introduced students to the modern business world. This year, typing was taken in conjunction with Speech. Students mastered proper form and technique in Typing, while they developed poise, confidence, delivery, organization, and voice control in the Speech segment of the elective.

In Accounting and Bookkeeping, students learned how to keep books for a business: the handling of sales and purchases, the issuing of checks, the depositing of all checks received, the recording of all entries as well as the preparation of financial statements. However, in Accounting, students not only learned the essentials of bookkeeping, but they also delved into income tax and practice sets.

Students in Business Law and Consumer Education were introduced to the guidelines of the Uniform Commercial Code. They learned their rights as citizens and the responsibility of the law to uphold these rights.

The Money and Banking, as well as the Economics course, equipped students with an understanding of fundamental monetary and fiscal policies in addition to basic economic principles. Students examined the various financial institutions, the national debt, and the stock market. They also learned how the United States and other countries allocated their resources. By offering a wide range of electives, the Business Department prepared students to excel in today's business world.

Commercial Art Added

Offered to all students as an elective, Art Foundations concentrated on five different fields of art. Taught by Mr. Smerz and Mr. Scott, students were exposed to drawing, design, painting, printing, and crafts throughout the year. By experiencing these different areas, students became acquainted with the basic procedures, principles, and materials used in art.

After having completed Art Foundations, students could take Art II. Emphasis was placed on an advanced study of drawing and painting. In the first semester, students were required to complete drawing problems with an emphasis on composition. Landscape painting received emphasis during the second semester.

Commercial Art, available to those students who successfully completed Art I and Art II, introduced students to the basic techniques used in commercial art. Layouts, paste-ups, color separations, camera ready pieces, and the development as well as the realization of ideas received the greatest amount of emphasis. Helping students to prepare a personal portfolio for Commercial Art schools, the class projects were designed to aid the more serious art students. Using the knowledge learned in commercial art, students were better prepared for Design or Commercial Art schools.

Assuring that all students receive exposure to team sports and the opportunity to be in top physical condition, the physical education course was offered to Freshmen, Sophomores, and Juniors. Keeping a balance between the mental and physical aspects in school, the gym course accomplished its task with a program which alternated a week of workout with a week of team sports. Workout week consisted of relay races, various forms of calisthenics, and distance running in warmer weather. During this week, the weight room was also employed to promote further physical development. During sports week, students participated in games: touch football, soccer, speedball, basketball, dodgeball, and softball. All of these sports required teamwork which gave students a better working relationship. The physical education instructors; Mr. DeCarlo, Mr. DeLach, Mr. Fabrizio, Mr. Kocher, and Mr. Paweleski all strove to fine tune the students' bodies in addition to giving experience and knowledge in various sports.

Overtime Takes Its Toll

"Despite a number of good, steady performances, the season went against us. This was a season of heartbreaking losses," commented varsity coach Mr. Oliver after summing up the soccer season as "Frustrating."

"As nine of the losses were by one point, seven of which were scored in the last minute of overtime, it became very wearing on the team's spirit," Mr. Oliver further added. The varsity and Sophomore teams often worked out together, beginning practices with a series of stretches and calisthenics. These exercises were followed by a period of running and then intra-squad play.

Yet, despite much hard work, disappointment followed the varsity squad. "The St. Rita game was the turning point of our season from promising to bleak. This was the most crucial point in our season and the loss sufficiently hurt our spirit and removed some of our fighting edge," said Mr. Oliver.

Sophomore coach, Mr. Matthew, though slightly disheartened added, "Yet, all in all the sophomores didn't do too badly." The Sophomores posted a fifth place finish in the Catholic League.

Br. Verre's reaction to his freshman team's progress was, "A lot of improvement from month to month," and "I have big expectations for them."

Dedication Yields Results

Starting in early June, the Cross Country teams continually practiced in order to perfect their form. Paced by senior Mark Rubino and junior Louis Chavez, the Varsity qualified to compete in the state sectionals for the third successive year. Although the members trained all season long for the playoffs, the biggest moment of season did not occur in the playoffs but in the Argo Invitational. Working together, under Mr. Murphy's supervision, the team won a hard earned third place trophy at the Invitational. Later in the year, the Varsity placed sixth in the Catholic League Championship. In the match, captain Mark Rubino finished a strong fifth, only a few seconds behind the leader.

Led by Doug Lenz, Bruce Meiner, and Don Stack, the Sophomore team impressively finished third in the Catholic League with a 7-3 record. The freshman team, coached by Br. Kramer, placed seventh in the Catholic League, while posting a 7-3 season record.

Triumph In Districts

Practicing at Cog Hill in Palos whenever possible, the varsity golf team finished with a 5-3 dual meet record. Led by junior Ken Gaidas and sophomore Marty Caifano the golfers finished second in the Catholic League. Guided by first year coach Br. Granitz, the team then went on to win the district but finished tenth in the sectionals. Ken Gaidas won a medal in the districts. He finished first in a field of 78. The sophomore team finished with a 5-4 dual meet record and placed fourth in the Catholic League.

Bowlers Capture Third

Once a student joined the intramural bowling league, he was eligible for the school's bowling team. First year moderators Br. McKenna and Br. Zlatis felt that this requirement hindered the participation of prospective team members. Yet, once averages were established, the varsity and junior varsity teams were selected. Having some prospective team member's not in intramural bowling, the varsity placed fifth in the Catholic League with a 4-8 record. The junior varsity concluded its season with a 5-7 record while finishing third in the Catholic League. Senior John Eichten made the Catholic League all-star team. Captains John Eichten and Dave Michalowicz led the varsity, while the junior varsity had the leadership of Mike Murphy and John Matijevich.

Vikes Crush 4A Champs

In order to insure a successful season, the Varsity Football team began preparations in August. During training camp, team members worked out six hours a day for three days a week. However, as the season began, the team practiced daily for two and one half hours. Through hard work and diligence, the varsity compiled an 11-2 season record. Under Head Coach Mr. O'Neill, the Vikings won the Catholic League South Division title, while also finishing second in State competition.

Exploding for twenty-nine points in the second half, the Varsity trounced Joliet Catholic, the defending 4A division champions, 35-8, in the pre-league opener. However, the remaining three pre-league games were not won as easily. In these games, the Vikings barely managed to outlast the tough and determined Br. Rice, Loyola, and Weber squads.

In the regular season opener, the Varsity defeated Mt. Carmel, 29-19. Inspired by fan support during Homecoming, the team devastated Mendel, 41-6. Avenging last year's loss, the Vikes stunned St. Rita, 21-20, at Soldier Field.

Retaliating for a pre-league loss, a stubborn Br. Rice team handed St. Laurence its first loss of the season. Putting the loss behind them, the players rebounded to roll over St. Francis deSales, 21-0. By winning, the team was crowned Catholic League South Champions; thus, the team earned a State playoff berth for the third time in the last four years.

The first post-season game pitted the Vikings against an undefeated Robeson team. Displaying their prowess once again, the team startled the Public League champions, 24-6. In the next contest, the Varsity squeezed by Fenwick to win the "Catholic League Title."

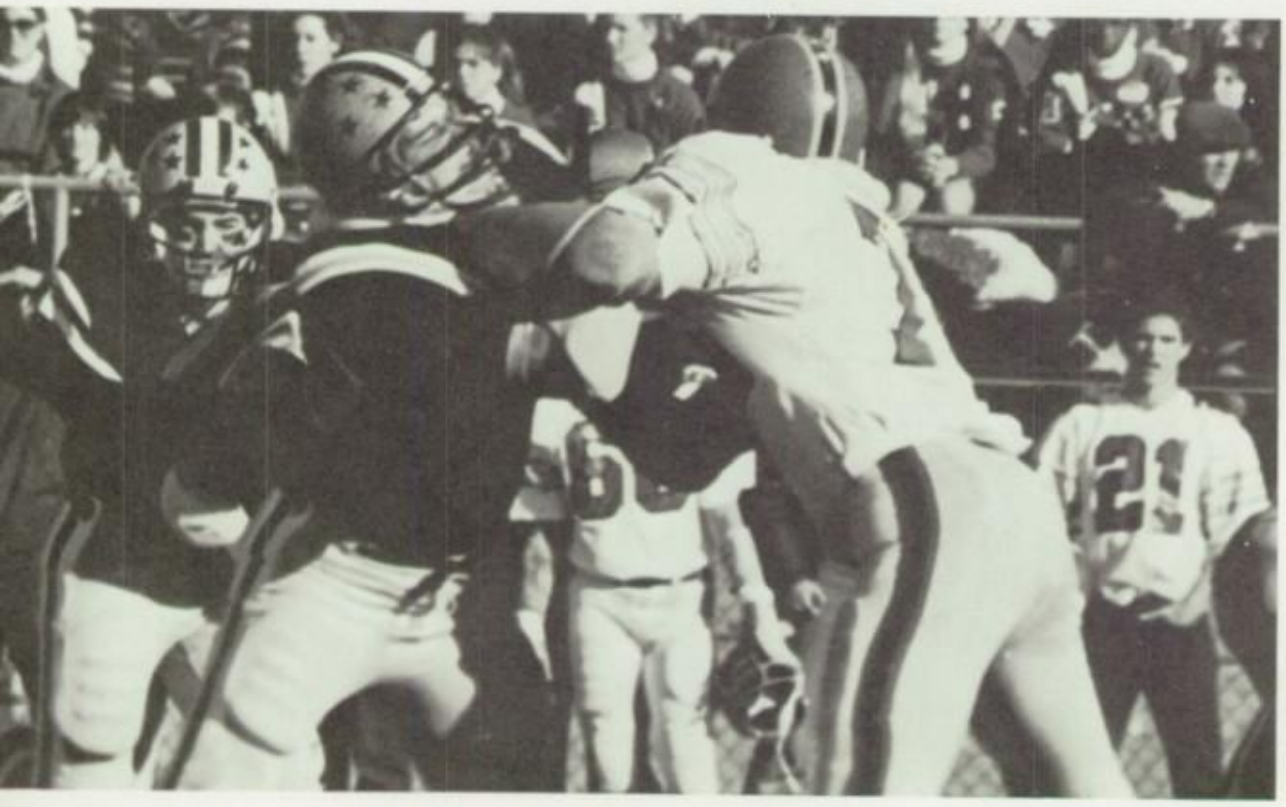
Second In State



The 14-8 victory over Fenwick set the stage for the rematch against Deerfield, who defeated St. Laurence in the semi-finals two years ago. In the highly contested struggle, the Vikings won, 17-14, after Bob Hoop kicked a field goal in the waning seconds of the game.

In the State Championship game, the Vikings faced an unbeaten East St. Louis team. Even though wasted opportunities marred the game for the Vikes, the team remained undaunted throughout the game. Suffering a heartbreaking 20-14 loss, the team was awarded the second place trophy.

If they did not always play as a cohesive unit, the team members would not have succeeded in accomplishing their goals. However, several players received commendations for their performances during the season. Brian Dowling, Tony Paterno, and Mark Hughes received All-Catholic honors, while Mike McQuinn and Ron Prusa were named to the All-Catholic and All-State teams.

Grueling Season Takes Toll

Possessing unlimited potential, the inexperienced Freshman Football team finished their grueling season with a misleading 2-5 record. Even though they lacked experience, the Frosh continually maintained the desire to learn.

Practicing daily for over two hours, the young Vikings scrimmaged, exercised, and ran. Coaches Mr. Kocher, Mr. Trombetta, and Br. Reilly tailored practices to stress offense rather than defense. Although the Freshmen mainly concentrated on the running game, they also utilized the passing attack. By gaining confidence in their capabilities as players, the freshmen developed and improved as the season progressed.

The Sophomore Football team, utilizing its talent to the utmost, concluded the season at 3-4. During practices, head coach Mr. Ewald and assistants Mr. Pawelski and Mr. DeCarlo stressed teamwork, basics and other techniques intended to prepare the team for the season.

A key victory over Loyola in overtime gave the team needed momentum, but it was soon reversed by two close losses to Gordon and Br. Rice. The team never eased up though and it came back to crush St. Francis 28-0 in the season's final game.

Fourth In State

After a slow start in the fall, the varsity water polo team successfully turned its performance around. Led by senior Jack Collins, who scored 45 goals, the varsity squad was able to finish fourth in the state tournament.

Yet, none of the team's success came easy. The members began practicing early in the school year to assure a strong program. With the help of coach Mr. Caliendo and moderator Br. Beckstrom, the team was taught to use its skills and superb swimming ability to their fullest extent. The frosh-soph water polo team also showed signs of turning itself around. The frosh-soph team turned its 1-6 fall record into a 3-2 spring record.

Practicing every evening from mid-November to late February, the swimming team achieved remarkable improvements as each member turned in his career best times. The sessions, held from seven to nine p.m. at Brother Rice High School, concentrated mainly on endurance. Each evening, first year head coach Mr. Caliendo, also stressed a particular stroke aspect.

With only two weeks of practice prior to their first meet, most swimmers turned in surprisingly good performances. These early performances surpassed last year's best times and led to a 6-11 overall record along with a berth in the districts.

Instilled with a winning attitude, the team set nine school records. Highlighting the season, varsity captain Jack Collins and frosh-soph captain Dave Krueger both broke three school records.

Wrestlers Place In State

With a balanced team consisting of two freshmen, seven juniors, and three seniors, the varsity wrestling team finished its season with a 15-5 overall record. The team began practicing in November. Lasting for an hour and a half, practice consisted of calisthenics, daily drills, specific moves, and intra-squad scrimmages. Conditioning, fundamentals, execution, and hustle were also stressed throughout the year.

At the beginning of the season, the team's goal was to win the Catholic League Championship. Under the direction of Mr. Trombetta and a strong team effort led by seniors Ron Glaza, Tom Healy, and John Kenny, the team achieved their goal. In addition, for the first time in the history of St. Laurence, two wrestlers competed downstate. Surprisingly, both competitors, Tim Cocco and Keith Healy, were only freshmen.

Stressing hard work and dedication, Mr. DeCarlo coached the sophomore team to an impressive 11-5 record. The team started practicing at the beginning of December for an hour and a half each day. In order to prevent injuries, wrestlers began with calisthenics, followed by practicing new techniques. The high point of the season came when the team won the Catholic League Championship. Led by Don Stack, Ray Rybka, Mike Flannery and Tim Johnson, the team reached their preseason goal. The team's success was due to a favorable blend of freshmen and sophomores, as well as the team's total effort.

Under the leadership of first year coaches Mr. Pawelwski and Mr. Healy, the Freshmen wrestlers turned in a commendable performance. They finished with a 4-2 record, and just as the sophomores did, they won the Catholic League Championship.

Regional Crown Captured

With two of last year's starters returning, the Vikings compiled a 24-5 record, the third best in the school's history. Within the Catholic League, the team achieved a 10-3 record and were crowned co-champs.

Having only three weeks of practice before their first game, Coach Prestinario stressed teamwork. However, as the season progressed, he incorporated a more complex offense and defense. Practices also concentrated on free throw shooting and jump balls.

Led by Kevin Oldendorf and Ron Lesiak in points scored as well as rebounds, the Vikes averaged 62 points as an offensive unit. The consistent outside shooting of the guards also contributed heavily to this effort. On the other hand, the defense only allowed 48 points a game.

Never recovering one hundred per cent from his early season injury, Captain John Somerville's floor leadership was highly missed. Even after returning to the lineup, his presence did not spur the team to victory. The Vikings lost a key away game to DeLaSalle by a 44-42 score. But, contradictorily, this loss provided the Vikes with the needed spark. By this late season burst, the team regrouped to blow-out St. Rita at home, and won its next four games, one from a very good Loyola team. They finished their regular season by defeating Gordon Tech away. Thereby, St. Laurence tied Gordon Tech and DeLaSalle for the Catholic League Championship.

With their impressive record, the Vikings entered the Reavis Regional. Defeating both Reavis and Argo, the Vikes captured the Regional, and advanced to the sectionals. The first round pitted them against Richards whom they defeated. In the second round on March 14th, the season concluded with a loss to Downers Grove South. Down by ten at half time, an inspired Big Gold pulled within one point in the third quarter. As the fourth quarter opened, Downers Grove South scored on the ensuing play, leaving the gallant Vikings able to pull no closer than four putting them on the short end of a 71-60 decision.

Coaches Play Major Role

Lacking concentration, the freshman A basketball team struggled to compile a 3-15 record. Though lacking a quick start, the team continually improved upon its shooting ability over the entire year. Coached by Mr. Dunne, the team found defense being stressed in practices.

Unlike the A team, the B team concentrated on developing a fastbreak offense. Using their cohesiveness, the B team compiled a 7-6 record. Being inexperienced, the freshmen relied heavily upon their coach, Br. Krammer for help. The high point of the season proved to be the final game, when the team pulled out an overtime victory.

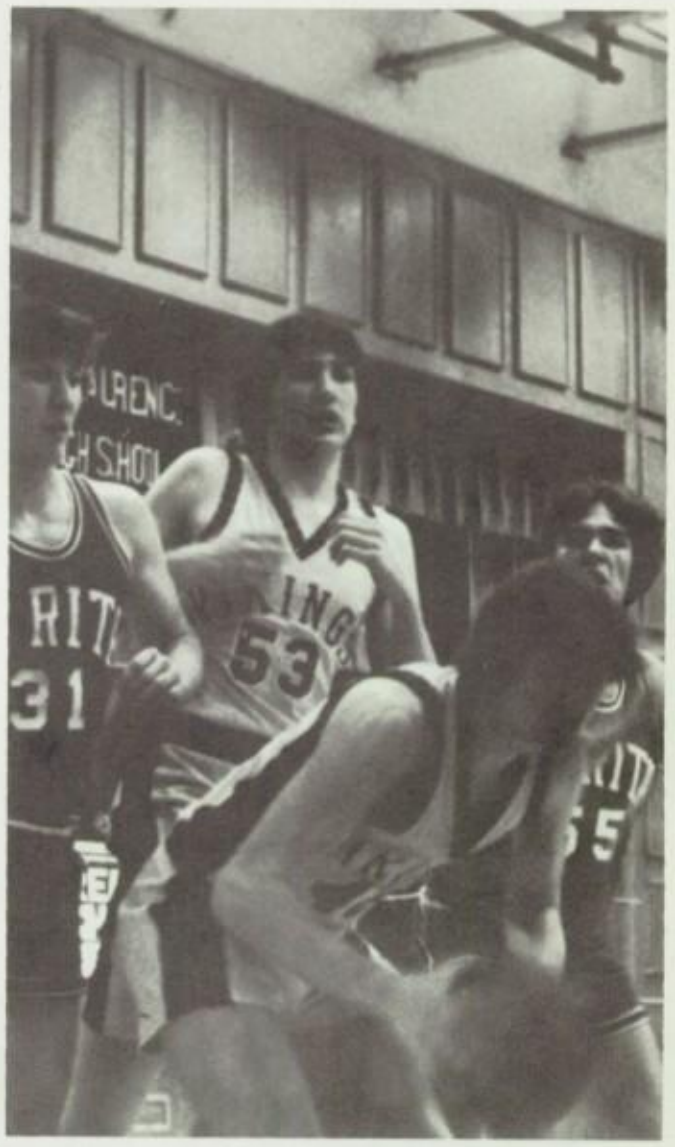
Sophs Capture Third



The sophomore basketball team, coached by Mr. Freyer, concluded its winning season with an 18-5 record. Having little or no experience as freshmen, the team found the coach stressing confidence in ability as well as ball handling skills. As the season progressed, the team members learned how to use their size as an intimidating factor. Led by captain Bob St. Clair, the sophomores got out to a quick start in the Catholic League. Losing a key game to DeLaSalle, the team lost some momentum. Recovering from the loss, the team concluded their Catholic League Season with a 9-4 record and sole possession of third place. The team's self confidence was once again bolstered as they won first place in the post season tournament held at Wheaton Central.

Injuries Hamper Season

Practicing for approximately five hours a week, the members of the Varsity Hockey Club began their season in October. Coached by Mr. Langlotz and Mr. Oliver, the team finished its season second in the Catholic League, while compiling the schools highest won-lost percentage for regular season play. However, with key players injured, the team was eliminated in the second round of the State playoffs by Br. Rice.

Although more than half the team was composed of Freshmen and Sophomores, the varsity played five present State Champions during the season, defeating two of them. The team played its best game all season when it trounced Connecticut's State Champion: South Kent Academy.

Led by captains Tim Langlotz, Frank DiCristina and Rick Carroll, the varsity scored almost as many shorthanded goals as it scored on power plays. On the whole, the team averaged six points a game, while allowing only two points to be scored by the opposition. Marty Caifano led the team and the entire League in scoring.

Concluding the season with a 16-30-7 record, the Junior Varsity finished fourth in the Southwest Junior Varsity League. Coached by Mr. Andree Stanojevic, the team progressed and matured into a cohesive unit throughout the season.

Murphy's Law

Murphy's Law would be a very applicable description of this season, stated tennis coach Br. Verre. "Whatever could have gone wrong did."

Although Br. Verre was very optimistic about the team's potential, the loss of key singles players to injury, such as Matt Lopez forced Br. Verre to constantly rearrange the starting lineup. Inconsistency was yet another problem. No one player was able to consistently win. The doubles team of Jim Alberti and Dave Michalowicz was one of the few bright spots in an otherwise bleak year. Finishing seventh in the Catholic League, the team still showed superb talent when it played at its very best.

Sophs Capture Title

Under the direction of Coach Mr. Fabrizio, the Varsity baseball team placed second in the Catholic League with a 10-3 record. Beginning deep in the winter months, training was held in the gym and even outside if the weather was not too harsh.

Practices centered around hitting, and also the actual depiction of defenses, as well as practicing the double play, pick-offs and throwing out base runners. All of this practice readied the Vikings for their opponents.

Having a well-rounded team, the efforts of starting pitchers, Jeff Kacmarek, Jim Mikula, Rick Gregus, and Joe Pratl were greatly accented by the remainder of the players. Led throughout the year by Tony Paterno and Jim Zajac the team finished the year on the upswing.

Losing two of their first three games, the frosh-soph team remained confident and came back to finish 12-1 in the Catholic League. This effort was good enough for the team to win sole possession of first place in the Catholic League. Under the guidance of their coach Mr. Tarjan, the frosh-soph team compiled a 13-7 overall record.

Five Make State

Crowned Frosh-Soph Catholic League Champions the past two years, the multi-talented Varsity Track team finished a surprising third in the Catholic League. Slightly mistaken in his projection of fourth in the league, Head Coach Br. Granitz with the assistance of Br. Wielatz, Br. Reilly, and Mr. Murphy led the team to a 9-1 dual meet record.

Beginning in mid-February and continuing through May, practices consisted of stretching, weight lifting, special drills, and technique perfection. Each practice session lasted a minimum of one and a half hours.

The Catholic League Championships and the districts were the climactic points of the season. The districts led up to the main event in the track year: the State Championships. Through their superior performances, Wally Shields and the two mile relay team: Mark Rubino, Tim Leigh, Joe Manning, and Lou Chavez represented the school in the State Championships. Wally Shields placed fourth in the shot put, while the relay team finished seventeenth.

In addition to these athletes, John Kissane established new school records in the long jump and in the triple jump. Mike Sulima tied an existing school record with a high jump of 6′3″. Hurdler John DiNovella, sprinter Kevin Cooke, as well as the mile relay team composed of Tom Kuzel, Joe Manning, John Kissane, and Terry Leigh, who individually missed a State berth by .03 seconds, were also instrumental in the team's success.

Exhibiting outstanding individual as well as team performances, the Frosh-Soph Track team concluded the season with an 8-1 record while placing sixth in the Catholic League Championships.

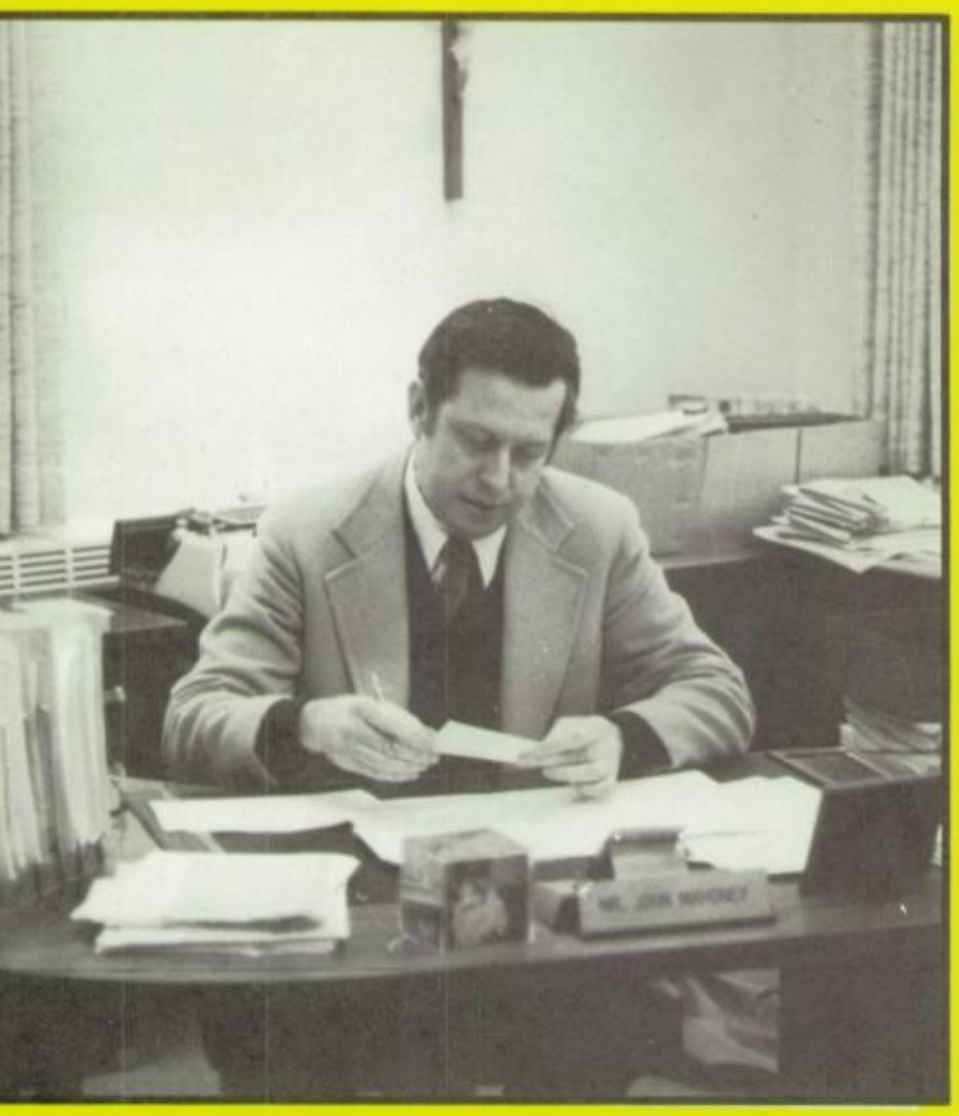
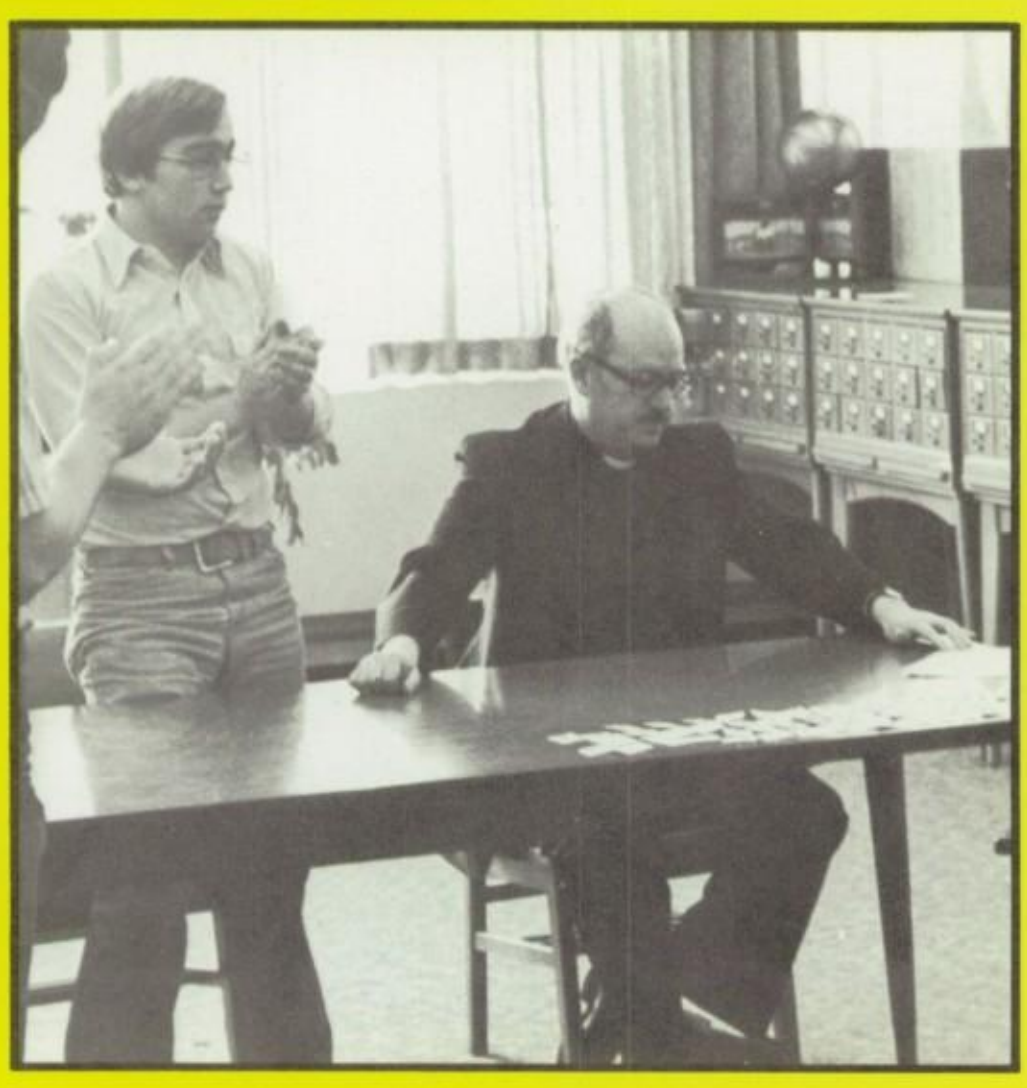
What A Year





Remember the stranger from the beginning of the book. For the past school year he has kept in close contact with St. Laurence's activities and progress. He now has some time to recall those exciting times.

I remember those thrilling athletic contests: packed stadiums, shouting crowds, amazing comebacks, and extraordinary success. Sure was a good year for all sports.

Sports, huh, the Fathers' Club helped in it and other activities. They even had their own Smoker. Mothers also got into the act. Not to be outdone, the Mothers' Club held its own fundraisers. In fact, if it weren't for the parents, where would this school be?

However, school wasn't merely all activities. Had some pretty smart students there. Yeah, they sure did have a good academic program. I remember the Honors Convocation. Really impressive the way they honored all of those students. Even had 50 or so kids in the National Honor Society. And at graduation, wow! I never saw so many students graduating with honors and winning so many awards.

Above all, the school continually maintained a Christian outlook on life. Yes indeed, some good young men turned out by those teachers and Brothers. Those retreats and Masses helped to promote the students' awareness of religion in their daily lives. Even went so far as to organize that Vikings For Christian Service group which helped the area's elderly. They also had many other drives and fundraisers to help the needy.

Talking about organizations, students could join many different non-athletic activities. Yearbook, Math Club, Ski Club, Drama, Intramurals — they all were open to students. And if that wasn't enough, dances were held to encourage the students' social life. Wow, this school has it all!

These thoughts could have been any stranger's recollections. What do you remember most about this school year's activities, fundraisers, learning — think about it.
